IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON—Wouldn't we do well to make a mental note that Italy's surrender is mainly a triumph of force and not something that happened because we had high ideals or knew a neat diplomatic trick or two?

So long as it was uncertain whether the Allies would win the war, for instance along about a year ago, our high ideals and our diplomatic tricks did us no good in Italy. Only when superior force came into sight did Italy begin to crack.

Clapper

If we keep that clearly in mind and hammer that fact into our understanding while the event is hot, we may spare ourselves much confusion and dangerous optimism. Whatever contagious effect the example of Italy may have on Germany and on Japan will gain its force from the extent to which it appears in those countries that the United Nations will be able to bring crushing force to bear.

* * *

Once, as in the days of the Kellogg peace pact, we tended to believe that right made its own might. It makes us very pleased with ourselves to think, as some are doing now, that Italy's surrender was a triumph or right and justice and all of those noble ideals of democracy and freedom, and that Satan has taken a beating in Italy. He took it only when the United Nations were able to muster convincing force.

Mussolini was not overthrown until after Sicily was invaded and the Allied victory there was an imminent certainty. Whatever the Allies were able to do with psychological warfare to facilitate his overthrow gained its effectiveness because of the background of military force which was being brought to bear.

* * *

When Badoglio took over he wanted an armistice but one that would have kept us out of Italy. He appealed to his people to carry on with the war. If we had not had the force in sight, to go into Italy, Badoglio probably never would have got into Mussolini's shoes in the first place, and he never would have had to accept an unconditional surrender instead of the neutralization of Italy which he first tried to obtain.

* * *

What did the job in Italy was the force built up under General Eisenhower, and the successful landing of it in Sicily, and beyond that, the destruction in Italy by the Allied air force.

Badoglio's telegram to Hitler explaining why he surrenders, probably exaggerates the extent of Italy's helplessness in order to make a better alibi, yet it goes to the heart of the reason why Italy surrendered. Badoglio's description of the destruction or occupation of some of Italy's greatest towns, the paralysis of her industries, the disruption of transportation, and finally the impending invasion of the mainland which was ready at the time the armistice was actually signed, make it understandable why he tells Hitler he had to ask for an armistice to save Italy from complete ruin.

* * *

On our side there has been some squeamishness about the place that force should hold in the United Nations scheme of things after the war. Force has a bad name perhaps because it has been so often used. And with such ruthless effectiveness, by our enemies. But never was force used to finer ends for civilization than against Hitler and Fascist Italy. So long as they were in the ascendant and had the superior force, no nation, however inoffensive, was safe from the most brutal conquest.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEWBURGH — The American taxpayers never will know how much graft or loot they have been compelled to pay to the underworld of the construction racket, including contractors as well as union racketeers as part of the price of conducting this war. The horse has been stolen and there is no disposition on the part of any agency of the federal government to lock the door even now.

Pegler

This area on the west shore of the Hudson river, a region extending down into the political bad lands ruled by Frank Hague in New Jersey, has been a thieves' paradise. They looted the Delaware aqueduct project, a $300,000,000 project, the great Orangeburg embarkation center, five miles square and the flying fields for the United States Military academy.

The unions, principally the horribly corrupt rackets known as the operating engineers and the common laborers, have shaken down thousands of workers without mercy for years and are still at it, although Orangeburg is almost finished now and two gangsters of the common laborers' union have been convicted in the local state court by a dogged but handicapped Assistant Attorney General O'Neill, held over from the Lehman Democratic administration, and given 10 to 20 years in prison.

The vein of graft and extortion is petering out at last and the federal government obviously intends to let the crooks get away with it. A year ago, the war frauds division of the department of justice did send a man up to take a look and he gathered considerable information but he has never been back and when last heard of he had been transferred to duty on an urgent "dried egg case."

The Orangeburg center cost $30,000,000 and Stewart field and its satellites in the general neighborhood, now in its final stages but recently struck nevertheless by the operating engineers, cost $23,000,000, the unions have taken a tremendous toll in initiation fees, permit fees and dues and contractors with trucks and heavy machinery for rent in leveling hills have made their share.

At full force there were 18,000 men employed—working would be an overstatement—on the Orangeburg job and it is admitted that men would hide out and loaf at $1 an hour, straight time for common labor. Informants who worked in and around the project say that it was loaded with men from New York many of them with criminal records, recruited by the racketeers who took tribute of them at so much per head. Some men were fired for loafing but that meant only that others were hired and forced to pay the rackets for permission to work.

The most important individual racketeer has been Joe Fay, the vice president of the Operating Engineers International organization and president of the prevailing local and himself a contractor renting heavy excavating machinery, but he is a strong henchman of Frank Hague of Jersey City who is a powerful New Deal politician and Fay has not been troubled by the department of justice, although he is at present under two state indictments. Another interesting character in the Orangeburg center is Charles H. Prindle, jr., of Central Nyack, N. J., who is chairman of the Rockland county building trades council and of the county branch of the miscalled American Labor party. Prindle's council has general jurisdiction over the Orangeburg jobs and he is the personal possessor of a criminal record, having served time in Elmira reformatory under a sentence imposed in April, 1926, when he was 20, on his plea of guilty of a charge of running a fence for a sale of stolen automobiles. There were four such indictments and a police report on his activities says that he bought stolen cars from the actual thieves for low prices and sold them at a profit to residents of the county. Prindle also was employed on the Orangeburg project, possibly as an electrician, for that is represented to be his trade and he is a delegate of the local electricians' union.

The county prosecutors lack the staff, the money and the incentive, and moreover the unions and the contractors are in politics. The state of New York has done some superficial scratching. But the department of justice of the United States, which has full power and authority and many detective and prosecuting agencies and which is the victim of the looting, has done nothing.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

Hi'Ya, Stranger!

(Continuing last week's daytime quick-see of Manhattan with a tour of the night shift.)

* * *

So you want to catch all the high spots, and never mind the expense? Then let's make one of the 52nd street spots the first stop.

We'll walk there, because West 52nd street is New York's Montmartre, and you mustn't miss it—the gaudy banners outside the little basement jive joints, the neon signs, the come-on pictures of floor-show strippers, the musicians "taking five" in little groups on the sidewalk, the sound of jazz coming from every open door and now and then the melodic whimper of a torch singer wailing about love.

* * *

Kilgallen

It would take you and your girl a week of nights and at least $100 to see everything on this noisy rowdy street, so this time let's just check in at one place that is neither noisy nor rowdy, "21."

Here we are, going through the big iron gate into the brownstone front, into the warm scented lobby that is just like a living room with a log fire burning and the lamps turned low. That wire haired little fellow tied to the chair? That's Julie Hayden's dog—she's inside sitting at a corner table with George Jean Nathan.

Have a dubonnet and sherry cocktail, stranger—it's the thing this year. Last year it was gin and tonic. Little things like that make you feel hep to the local jive if you hail from a faraway town in Michigan or Arkansas.

No use telling you who all these people in the bar are, but they are solid citizens. Advertising men, owners of radio chains, newspaper publishers, theatrical producers, lawyers who never work unless the fee is heavy, and actors in the very big money.

* * *

You want to see a ballplayer or a prizefighter? Okay, finish your cocktail and we'll go to Toots Shor's around the corner. Looks like a Hollywood place, doesn't it, with all the wood paneling and red leather?

See that young fellow sitting alone at the bar, the one with the chickens on his shoulders? That's Col. Rosie O'Donnell, one of Chennault's heroes—but you know him better as the boy who made that famous run for West Point and beat Navy in as stirring a football game as fans ever saw.

Over there is Mel Ott and his boss, Horace Stoneham, trying to explain to those fellows what a tough break the Giants have had. And here comes Jim Farley, who may buy that ball team yet.

* * *

It's midnight, let's go to a—you never saw a midnight movie? The last one in your town goes on at ten o'clock? Well, we'll take care of that situation. . . . Yes, the price is high. It used to be 55 cents at this hour but every one is tacking it on these days.

Now, how about Reuben's or Lindy's? You can't leave town without having chessecake at Lindy's, and you shouldn't pass up a chance to sample Chicken Reubenola the restaurant where all the theatrical luminaries and town "characters" gather in the small but interesting hours of the morning.

Want to call it quits now? Had a good time? Well, so long, stranger—glad you liked our town. We'll do it again some time!

CONGRESS DUE TO MAKE CHECK ON MANPOWER

Survey of Military, Industrial Needs Expected to Be First Order of Business.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Congressional leaders returning from summer recess left little doubt today that a new survey of the entire manpower needs of the military and war industry will be the first order of business when congress reconvenes next Tuesday.

Sen. Charles L. McNary of Oregon, senate Republican leader, placed manpower problems at the top of a legislative schedule which includes taxation, foreign relations and price control rollback subsidies.

Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky is also believed to favor a speedy review of the entire manpower situation. He is expected to return to Washington today.

The problem will confront the senate the first day if Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D., Mont., follows through with his avowed intention of calling for an immediate vote on his bill to defer drafting of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers.

The bill now is pending on the senate calendar but if Wheeler seeks its passage the administration is expected to urge instead that the measure be returned to the senate committee on military affairs for a new survey of overall manpower requirements.

There it would be lumped with the suggestion of universal national service legislation on which Sen. Warren R. Austin, R., Vt., already has amassed an impressive record of testimony.

The bill, sponsored in the house by Rep. James M. Wadsworth, R., N. Y., gained new impetus in another quarter when Chairman Andrew J. May, D., Ky., of the house military affairs committee announced his committee plans to re-open the subject immediately.

One high congressional authority, who declined to be quoted, said a survey of over-all needs in the light of recent military successes may solve the entire manpower problem and the related draft of fathers without further legislation.

He expressed a belief that if the surrender of Italy is complete, it may be possible to knock Germany out of the war principally with air power within a year.

WALLACE IDEA CALLED BALLOON

Politicos See Suggestion On FDR As Hint Of Plans.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Vice President Henry A. Wallace's nomination of President Roosevelt for permanent peace conference chairman appeared to some capital politicos today to be a trial balloon hint of new administration plans.

Some political observers took note that Wallace's proposal seemed to take a fourth term for granted. Still others tried to reconcile the vice president's certainty of "peace approaching" with the administration's urgent efforts to convince the country that we are in for a long war.

SEES 'OUT' ON POST-WAR PLAN

Bricker Says He'll Shift Program If Court Rules Commission Illegal.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—The program of Ohio's post-war planning commission will go forward regardless of the outcome of a forthcoming court test of the commission's legality, Gov. John W. Bricker declared today.

The program will, if necessary, be turned over to the state development and publicity commission, Bricker said.

Legal authorities in the Capitol have questioned the commission's validity since the legislature in creating it appointed some of its own members to the commission.

Bricker announced the possibility of transferring the program to the development and publicity commission following the refusal of four legislators to serve on a newly-named commission to construct new schools for the deaf and the blind.

The appointees informed the governor they feared their presence on the commission would result in the same confusion as that facing the post-war planning group.

Members of the publicity commission include: Horton Hampton of Cleveland, chairman; Justin Rollman of Cincinnati, Reno Hoag of Marietta, Peter Todsen of Port Clinton, Col. William M. Mumm of Columbus and Dwight D. Hatcher of Toledo.

BRIEF ILLNESS ENDS IN DEATH

Clinton D. Allewein, 65, Succumbs At Mt. Vernon Hospital.

FREDERICKTOWN — Clinton D. Allwein, 65, of nearby Waterford, died early today at Mercy hospital in Mt. Vernon following a brief illness.

Surviving are his widow, Eva; a son, Howard, at home; two brothers, Ernest, Mansfield, and James, Bellville; and a sister, Mrs. Austa McAninch, Mansfield.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2:30 p. m. Monday at North Fork church. Rev. Grover Swoyer, pastor of the First English Lutheran church of Mansfield will officiate. Burial will be in the church cemetery.

Although she has never seen him and doesn't expect to very soon, Mrs. J. A. Rigby of Balgreen farm near Mansfield has "adopted" an 11-year-old British war waif whose home was destroyed by a bomb. The "adopted" child, Joseph Ince, has just left a hospital in England and was removed to a colony operated under the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children. The little boy's father disappeared soon after the family's home was bombed and the mother was injured. The family thinks he may have enlisted in the armed forces, although nothing has been heard from him. Mrs. Rigby will contribute $15 a month to care for the boy and soon will receive a picture and a brief history of him. She hopes to be able to see him sometime.

In a recent letter to his mother, Mrs. Charles Brown, Dr. Charles G. Brown, with the medical corps of the Persian Gulf command area, enclosed a copy of the Persian Gulf edition of the Yank, army weekly. He had underlined a short paragraph in the paper paying tribute to Mansfield blood donors, "A total of 310 Mansfield, Ohio residents and 155 Ohio State Reformatory inmates donated blood during a visit by the mobile blood donor unit in Richland county." Dr. Brown wrote he is proud of the splendid report from his home town and knows how necesesary it is that the work continue.

The hundreds of cans of fruit and vegetables Mansfield housewives are storing away now are no joy to the city garbage department which is having its biggest rush in years. Garbage Superintendent L. L. Linham said his men are hauling 25 tons of waste materials, largely from canning operations, daily from Mansfield back yards, and his department is having trouble keeping up with the supply. Corn cobs and husks are among the most difficult materials to dispose of at the garbage plant and they are making up a large part of the garbage collections these days. "I didn't know there was so much sweet corn in Richland county," Linham said.

NEW SULFAS TO AID WOUNDED

Three Compounds With Iodine Hailed as Effective Against Gangrene.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Development of three new types of sulfa compounds which might aid materially in the recovery of the war wounded was disclosed here today by Dr. Paul Goedrich of the research department of Rutgers University College of Pharmacy, Newark, N. J.

In a paper presented to the 91st annual meeting of the American Pharmaceutical association, Dr. Goedrich reported the new compounds were formed by inter-action of the sulfa drugs with iodine.

Principal property of the parent sulfa-iodine compounds, he said, is their definite spore killing action on cultures of tetanus, gangrene and anthrex. None of the sulfa compounds in use at present exhibit any germ killing action on bacteria cultures in laboratory tests, he added.

Dr. Goedrich, who was unable to attend the convention, stated in his paper the new sulfa compounds had not been tested clinically on wounds but such investigations would "proceed immediately."

Unlike the compounds now in use which he said were selective in local applications on wounds and had no effect in certain types of infections, the research pharmacist asserted the new compounds were effective against all types of organisms.

Edward L. Bernays of New York told the convention a public survey he had conducted for the association showed the nation's druggists should prepare for a "post-war trend of medical care organized on a mass basis."

COURT MARTIAL HEARS EVIDENCE ON DRINKING

Prosecution to Charge Today That Commander Was Drunk While on Duty.

(By United Press)

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—The prosecution in the court martial of Col. William T. Colman today was scheduled to present testimony that the deposed Selfridge Field commander was drunk on duty at the army's Oscoda, Mich., airbase.

Evidence already has been introduced on the alleged illegal transfer by Colman of 11 enlisted men, including Pvt. (now lieutenant) Benson Ford, son of the late Edsel Ford, and two sons of an official of the Alladin company, Bay City, Mich., which reportedly arranged for the gift of a summer camp to Colman.

Details of Colman's alleged intoxication on the night of April 23 at the Oscoda air base, a subsidiary of Selfridge Field, have not yet been revealed at the trial, although testimony has been heard concerning three other occasions when Colman was declared to be under the influence of liquor.

One of these occasions resulted in shooting of Pfc. William McRae, a Negro soldier by Colman last May 5 and caused an official army inquiry which charged the former Selfridge commander with 29 violations of the articles of war.

Proceedings yesterday centered around the testimony of Harry H. Bennett, director of the Ford Motor company, called to testify concerning the transfer of Ford.

Bennett admitted he had talked to Colman, Lieut. Col. Thomas Lanphier, of Detroit, and the office of Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the army air forces, in an attempt to obtain Ford's transfer to officers' candidate school.

Lanphier told him that young Ford should put in an application in the usual way, Bennett related, and that Colman later wrote a letter to obtain Ford's transfer to Selfridge.

Ford was transferred to Selfridge in Oct., 1942, shortly after his induction. Three months later he was sent to officers' training school. He now is stationed at the Detroit induction center.

To every man of the armed forces, especially those overseas, we at home have one supreme obligation: we must keep the lines of equipment—guns and ammunition—constantly and adequately flowing to the battle fronts. War Bonds are the American way of meeting this obligation As our Third War Bond Drive begins I urge earnestly that every man and woman in this country buy more bonds than ever before. The fighting men will bring you victory, but you must first give them this tangible and essential backing at home."—Admiral King, Commander-in-Chief, U. S. Fleet.

Stalin Would Be Welcome Guest

FEW SUBJECTS associated with the war have been more widely discussed than that of the absence of Marshal Josef Stalin from Roosevelt-Churchill meetings, and recent intimations by President Roosevelt that a meeting of the three might be arranged in the not distant future has led to all sorts of surmises as to the "when and where" of such a meeting.

Prime Minister Churchill's unusually long stay in this country after the Quebec conference, unexplained except that he was awaiting announcement of Italy's surrender, opened the way to speculation that Stalin might have made this the occasion for a secret trip to Washington—which, while improbable, could not be classed among impossibilities, in view of strict censorship.

It will be recalled that when Russian Foreign Commissar Molotov visited Washington last year no word of his presence was made public until he had returned safely to Moscow and it is reasonable to assume that similar measures would be applied in the event of a visit by Stalin.

In a way, this would be regrettable, as it would afford the people of America great pleasure to receive this great Russian leader with customary hospitality and to "show him around," so that he might gain a better idea of the accomplishments of democracy.

With present speed of air transportation it appears that Washington would be as convenient a meeting place for heads of the three great powers engaged in the European phase of the war against the Axis, as any that could be chosen, and when the urgency of personal direction of Russia's superb war effort is somewhat eased, a trip to our nation's capital might provide an enjoyable breathing spell for the Soviet chief. As for Mr. Churchill, he could probably hop over almost any time.

There's Also War In the Pacific

GREATER ATTENTION seems to be given by the reading public to the European theater of war than to that in the Pacific. There are several reasons for this, one being the fact that the United Nations have determined to crush the German foe first. Following the surrender of Italy, this gives the European theater special importance for the time being.

Then comes the fact that the Pacific war is harder to understand. In Europe a few fairly simple lines draw the map from day to day. The Russian front was here and is now there. The Allies move thus and so. But the island warfare is much harder to grasp—there are so many islands and they all have strange and unpronounceable names which many readers never heard of before.

But it's time to brush up on Pacific geography. The war there is tightening, strengthening, intensifying. Europe may be considered more important, for the moment, but as fast as MacArthur gets men, planes, ships and materials he makes good use of them. The Pacific war is quickening pace and enlarging in scope.

When the Burma campaign gets on in earnest, there will be still more to watch with deepened interest. Great preparations are being made to finish up Japan. Great results are even now being attained, with more to come.

Engineering Set To Music

THE AMERICAN engineer, going about the world doing notable things for material progress, has long been a favorite hero. But seldom has he invaded the so-called "fine arts." For him, the slide rule and the blueprint rather than the orchestral baton. Now this is changing.

At least a trend may be indicated in the operetta recently broadcast, whose locale is the Alaska highway. The basic features of this branch of art are maintained, of course. There is a strong, appealing man and an attractive woman. But the man is in charge of a construction outfit, in a region hitherto known more for mud than for music; the girl operates by radio, from a distance which ordinarily would be judged fairly safe from rough-neck molestation. But all things work in waves, the scientists say, and in this case the air waves do their stuff.

So it comes about that the construction gang sloshing along in the mud hears the girl's voice, and naturally an engineer is so diverted from his job that he had to "go down to the States and break that dame's neck, because he doesn't like women singing that way to lonely men." And thus the inevitable happens.

ALLIES IN WAR MUST BE ALLIES IN PEACE

German Army Leaders Predict Climax Within Another Month

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

GERMAN army leaders predict that war developments will reach a climax within the next four weeks.

If we wanted to be argumentative we should, of course, point out that the conflict already has turned the corner and that Herr Hitler is definitely on the way out. Maybe the Nazis would concede that in their hearts, for from Stockholm comes this amazing dispatch:

Berlin has notified the Swedish stone industry to halt quarrying granite which had been ordered for post-war construction of victory monuments and official buildings. An enormous contract for the stone was made at the start of the blitzkrieg, which long ago had the blitz knocked out of it.

Anyway, it would be easy to agree with the Hitlerite captains that another month or so may produce a situation which will enable us to see the end of the European struggle much more clearly. That length of time should clarify a number of points that will determine the speed with which the finish will come. For instance:

We must know how long it's going to take to break German resistance in Italy. The Nazis are showing grim signs of fight, and if they stick to their guns they can cause the Allies a lot of trouble and delay. However, indications are that we're not sending a boy to do a man's work, but will continue to land troops until we can annihilate the enemy. There's no present cause for anxiety.

Another month or six weeks probably will tell us what further invasions we are to get this year. We should know in that time whether the present invasion-type of bombing which the Anglo-American air fleets are doing along the French and Belgian coasts, and the full-dress invasion rehearsal just held, are forerunners of amphibious operations against western Europe or are merely part of the war of nerves and an attempt to draw German forces from the Russian front.

* * *

WE SHOULD KNOW, too, whether Balkans are to be invaded, and just how far the rebellious little Axis satellites are prepared to go in revolt against the master gangster. Things look black for him in the Balkans, and the storm might break at any time, quite apart from Allied invasion.

In this connection the day is rapidly approaching when we shall have an answer to the war-long question of whether Turkey will send her big army to the aid of the Allies. The Turks have been leaning that way, and they are among the world's fiercest fighters.

Another month or less should give us the denouement of the unbelievable Russian offensive which continues to sweep the Germans back with a speed that threatens to produce a rout if the autumn rains don't arrive to save the invaders.

One of the most important points upon which we want further light is how the German public is taking the surrender of Italy, coming as it does on top of the awful bombing they are enduring and the frightful sacrifice of blood which Hitler is pouring out on the altar of his evil ambitions. We know already that gloom stalks the Fatherland.

On this issue it's interesting to note that the Italian people had sickened of Mussolini and Fascism and war long before the historic surrender.

Even more important is likely to be the striking fact that Italians have trusted the Allies—indeed welcomed them both in Sicily and on the mainland—and that this trust is meeting its reward in kindly treatment. That's going to register heavily in the minds of the German public and the peoples of the satellite Balkan states.

The demonstration that the Allies have no Himmler the Hangman will win a lot of votes for our side.

Timely Editorial

Idea From Ohio.

Robert F. Jones, Republican congressman from Lima, has made a suggestion which has so much practical wisdom in it that it should be made a major objective when congress resumes work. Congressman Jones urges establishing congressional fact-finding agencies to keep close and business-like check on the executive agencies. Since congress appropriates the people's taxes for the work of bureaus, Mr. Jones points out that it would be sensible to follow through to know at all times what is being done with the money and to note when the agency's usefulness has passed.

This is a sensible plan whose operation would function immeasurably to re-establish popular confidence in the national domestic administration. It would be a potent remedy for the ills of bureaucracy.—Toledo Blade.

Health And Diet

Vaccine Has Made Diphtheria Rare.

—By DR. CLENDENING

THERE are few principles in medical science as well and firmly established as that diphtheria can be prevented by inoculation. The inoculation should be made first when the child is nine months old, and repeated by a stimulating dose at five or six years.

I presume more human being are protected against diphtheria in the United States today then against smallpox.

The result has been to wipe diphtheria practically off the continent of North America. In fact, this result has been so completely accomplished that it constitutes a brake on the continued use of the preventive measures.

A whole generation has grown up who do not realize what the horrors of diphtheria are. Our young parents today are of that generation. They are likely to say that all this talk about the danger of diphtheria is scare talk, that they never saw or heard of a case of diphtheria, so why should they submit their nine-months-old baby to this procedure?

Such a viewpoint is, as I say, perfectly natural under the circumstances. It takes imagination to remember that diphtheria used to visit a neighborhood and within a week five or six funerals with the little caskets of children three to ten years old would make its visitation forever memorable.

Eternal vigilance is the price of peace, and you must have your nine-months hopeful inoculated against diphtheria. It will do him no harm, not even cause a flutter.

Help 'Take a Hill' By Buying More Bonds

By ERNIE PYLE

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—(By Wireless)—One recent sunny afternoon I sat on a Sicilian slope and watched our artillery turn the German-held hillside across the valley into an insufferable geysering of dirt, rock, smoke, explosions and flame.

Our own troops lay waiting until this appalling barrage finally forbade human tenancy. We had plenty of shells, and we threw them in masses until the enemy hill was a pitiful thing.

In the midst of it the commanding colonel walked up and, sort of grinning, said:

"We're letting the taxpayers back home take that hill this afternoon."

It is no vain theory that more money and more work at home result, at this end, in lives saved and victories won. Over here we see it in actual practice.

The long, disheartening gap between effort and achievement has been bridged, and we see materializing here before our eyes the much preached slogan that American production can overwhelm our enemies.

It takes money and terrific work to avalanche all this night of material to our fronts here so far away. Yet how easy money is; and how easy even the hardest toil compared to the ceaseless agony of the men at the front. The bond you buy has by now become a direct thing which actually does save some American's life. And just as real and direct is the extra toil you put into every manufacture of every kind.

Thanks to you at home, we no longer must chant our bitter refrain of "too little and too late" here in the far places. We're getting the stuff, and fighting spirit is high. But the end is not yet, and millions may still bleed before it is all over.

If you could see just one man die on the battlefield, you would know how right it is to "let the taxpayers take" every hill possible. Believe it from us over here, we call to you and we know how true it is—more bonds and sweat at home mean less blood and tears for us all. You must buy to save those you love, and buy and buy again.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Italy's Surrender Acclaimed as Forerunner of Greater Victories

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE UNITED NATIONS scored their most resounding triumph of the war when, after days of mystery, the unconditional surrender of Italy brought an end to the war-making of Germany's Axis partner.

Hostilities ceased at a moment decided upon by the Allies, delayed to conform to other strategic plans. Fighting ended a full five days after representatives of the Badoglio government had met Allied leaders on Sicily, agreed to armistice terms which were later approved by Great Britain, the United States and the U. S. S. R.

In ordering an end to his country's ignominious war, Marshal Badoglio commanded Italians to cease hostilities with the Allies, but oppose attack from any other quarter.

General Dwight Eisenhower, Allied commander, told them: "All Italians who assist in the fighting against Germany will have the support of the United Nations."

Italy's unconditional surrender was one of the best kept secrets of the war. It explained the continued presence of Prime Minister Winston Churchill in America, the apparent dilatoriness of the Italian government, the fantastic lack of opposition which greeted British and Canadian troops of the Eighth army as they invaded Italy. It was after their landing that Italy threw in the towel.

The high Italian shore looked like washday in a public nursery, reported one witness, when the British destroyers Quail and Quilliam steamed through Messina Strait. Everywhere white flags and sheets proclaimed submission.

A day after the British Eighth army had swarmed across from Sicily to land on continental Europe, the first Allied warships to patrol the narrow channel drew fire from only one gun.

For the Canadians and British it was a "surprise" invasion. Their climactic landing on the European mainland, awaited since Dunkirk, proved easier than many training maneuvers.

At Home

Post-War Co-operation.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill, and a group of Republican leaders, bade Americans look ahead.

Forthrightly urging post-war British-American co-operation, both military and political, Churchill said in a Harvard university address: "It would be a most foolish and improvident act on the part of our governments, or either of them, to break up this smooth-running and immensely powerful machinery the moment the war is over."

Further, he hoped for—some day—"a common citizenship."

Meanwhile on Mackinac Island in Lake Michigan 49 selected Republicans—not including one-world-advocating Wendell Willkie—tackled the GOP dilemma: internationalism vs. isolationism, in an effort to formulate a '44 program.

Early, the Republican post-war advisory council reacted divergently when New York Governor Thomas Dewey bluntly announced he favored a military alliance with Great Britain.

A few days later the council presented its program: "Responsible participation" by the United States in an organization "among sovereign nations" . . . to attain permanent peace. This was qualified by a provision that in any conflict with the nation's vital interests U. S. should stick to the Constitution.

Railroad Tragedies.

Wartime brings a sharp increase in railroad wrecks, because of worn equipment, changing personnel and heavier traffic demands. During the week, two crack limiteds met disaster within 12 hours, one not far from the scene of a serious derailment of the week before. No less than four accidents occurred on main lines leading into New York City within seven days time.

Most serious of the tragedies befell the Pennsylvania crack Congressional Limited. Running nonstop to New York from Washington, with 541 passengers, the 16-car train was roaring through North Philadelphia when a pedestrian noticed a streak of flame at an axle of the seventh car. A moment later the car left the track, six others followed it in a crescendo of destruction. Soon 78 fatalities were counted, kept climbing.

Early next day, the New York Central's famed 20th Century Limited left the rails near Canastota, N. Y., after a type of accident rare in modern times. The engine's streamlined boiler burst, killing three crewmen.

* *

New Heat on Men.

As President Roosevelt called for greater industrial output, War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt announced that tighter controls over manpower would soon go into effect.

His statement followed a meeting with James F. Byrnes at which high army and navy officials renewed pressure for prompt enactment of national service legislation. They were disturbed by a continued two per cent lag in plane production, though it appeared that 7,700 planes built in August represented an improvement of about 4 per cent over July output.

Steps to tighten labor controls in the west coast plane and ship manufacturing centers were announced, and federal permission for pay increases beyond the little steel formula soon followed. This was designed to halt a drift of workers from aircraft factories to higher paying jobs in nearby shipyards.

* * *

Invasion Chief.

That U. S. Chief of Staff George C. Marshall will command the Allied forces which invade Europe from the north was accepted in Washington and London as first-class news, following a capital report published "on the highest authority."

The 62-year-old American soldier had long been rated as perhaps the leading military organizer and strategist in the United Nations. The Washington Evening Star, which first stated authoritatively that Gen. Marshall was slated to head the "second front," declared that he was also regarded by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill as one of our ablest leaders of men. To him has long been given much of the credit for American organizational success in the global war.

Abroad

Nazi Rout Speeded.

In another sensational week the Red Army swiftly completed reconquest of the Donets Basin. Moscow said its land drives and air attacks were demoralizing what the Nazis termed a "planned retreat" toward the Dnieper River, their last-ditch defense line in Russia.

Only 115 miles east of strategic Kiev, the rail junction-stronghold of Konotop fell after a day's fighting that killed 10,000 Germans.

To the South, Soviet forces smashed to the big industrial and mining city of Stalino, 70 miles northwest of fallen Taganrog. Stalino was the key to Nazi defenses in the Donets basin; had been held for two years as a heavily-fortified bastion of the shattered German line based on Taganrog.

Retreating, the Germans left it in flames.

All along a 600-mile front the Soviets captured new towns, boosted their total bag to 1,500 localities regained in one week.

* * *

Uneasy New Order.

Attention of both Germany and the Allies centered again on the Balkans, where, it was learned, British and Greek staff officers from Cairo had traveled hundreds of miles through enemy-held territory to confer with 600 Greek guerrilla leaders.

Patriot resistance was keyed in with Allied military plans for the Middle East, arrangements made for a flow of weapons to Balkan guerrilla armies, said to total 150,000. Moscow announced that Yugoslavs had captured the important Adriatic seaport of Susak, near Italian Fiume.

While openly nervous about the Balkans, Nazi military authorities prepared for a possible invasion of southern France. Civilians were cleared from a 50-mile coastal strip, it was reported.

Germany itself was heavily bombed during the week.

* * *

Slap at Argentina.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull has been criticized since the announcement of Undersecretary Sumner Welles' resignation over policy disputes. Hull has been accused of coddling pro-Axis neutrals.

During the week, however, he scathingly turned down an Argentine bid for lend-lease military supplies—rebuking the Ramirez government for its relations with the Axis.

In this country's opinion, he wrote, Argentina "has indicated clearly that the Argentine armed forces will not under present conditions be used in a manner designed to forward the security of the world."

His note was in reply to a suave and lengthy plea from Foreign Minister Segundo Storni who asked for planes and equipment, despite neutrality.

Quotes

Joseph C. Grew: "Effective steps will undoubtedly have to be taken to rid the Japanese permanently of the cult of militarism. My own opinion, based on 10 years of experience in Japan, is that this process will present no insuperable obstacles."

Rear Admiral C. H. Woodward, warning against overconfidence: "Notice how little territory we have regained in the past year. Note how long it took us to recapture that ground, compared to the territorial advances made by the Germans and Japs when they were on the march."

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Can a Bird Think?

LAST EVENING after sunset, I passed near a white thorn bush in my neighbor's pasture. The branches were low. Already the thick green leaves had turned yellow, and some had made a covering on the grass, as in autumn after frost.

Although I saw no signs of life, at first, I felt the presence of something living about those leafy sprays. I did not go too near, but stopped about 15 feet away and listened. Not the slightest hint of sound, yet I saw two more yellow leaves drop—fluttering so naturally in the still air, that I almost doubted my suspicions.

Dusk gathered heavier. I still waited and watched. In the semi-darkness a small low branch moved up and down, then came to rest. Up higher on the tree another slender branch performed in similar manner. Then the silence was broken by the sleepy notes of several roosting quail.

Often through the summer I have listened to these same sleepy noises—but in the grass. Never until this evening did I hear them come from the branches of a tree. The grass is their natural sleeping place, and all about the meadows and low grassy places, I have come upon their camping spots, frequently. One night in a place—a ring of trampled grass with a small neat pile of droppings at the center. Their formation is a close circle, heads pointing out, so that at an alarm each goes a different way and gets off quickly.

I wondered what was the reason for this change of rest and cover, even while I applauded it. I remembered that each morning at dawn I had been hearing from the lowlands, the shrill, plaintive, bewildered voice of a mother quail calling her brood together. It always made me feel that I ought to go and help. It seemed to say, "Something terrible has happened. There is murder of innocents going on every night in all the lowlands."

Now I smiled as I thought, "She has done well. Nothing could disturb them much in that close-knit thorn tree—no prowling animal could reach and surprise them. Even the owl would not easily penetrate to that place of shelter. A house dog or a cautious fox would not try such a thorny venture."

I heard the motherly note as I turned to go, and the answers of cuddling youngsters murmuring into sleep. Tomorrow I shall be happy when I hear the glad note, "Bob Wh-ite," ring through the valley.

ALLIED FLEETS SWELLED BY 17 ITALY WARSHIPS

Yanks, British Beat Off Big Nazi Attacks to Take Port of Salerno.

Dispatches from the Naples-Salerno front said that the American forces met strong resistance from the time of landing.

The exact number of counter-attacks was not established but there were five on Thursday and several later, all of which were repulsed as the Allies hammered their way into Salerno.

German panzer units led all of the counter-attacks against the beachheads and Allied warships were forced to dart in close to shore to support our landing forces.

Naval experts at Salerno were making a quick survey of the port in the hope of using it as a base for supplies to the invading armies, which were mopping up pockets of resistance.

The British Eighth army in the Maida sector had reached the narrowest part of the bottleneck between the Gulf of San Eufemia and the Gulf of Squillace and apparently was encountering many obstacles. Although the Allies advanced some 25 or 30 miles to Maida by road, their air line advance was only about 15 miles.

Salerno, a town of 34,125, fell to the Fifth army under Lieut. Gen. Clark after an apparent 10-mile push up the Italian west coast. A dispatch from Henry T. Gorrell, United Press war correspondent who witnessed the Allied landings Thursday from the invasion fleet's flagship, revealed that the troops drove ashore some 40 miles south of Naples.

With the capture of Salerno, the Fifth army achieved its initial objective and won a harbor that will prove most valuable in supplying the island advance.

(A Cairo broadcast said new Allied landings have been made near Salerno.)

(Radio Algiers reported that British forces which landed at Taranto on the Italian south coast had occupied several airdromes around the city and were fanning out in three directions.)

From Salerno railroads radiate north toward Naples, east toward Foggia and Barletta and south toward the Calabrian peninsula, where the British Eighth army was reported making steady progress up the northwest and southeast coasts of the Italian foot in pursuit of fleeing German units.

The Germans were throwing all their strength into fierce counter-attacks near Salerno in an attempt to stem the Anglo-American drive toward Naples, but official reports emphasized that the Allied forces everywhere were making progress.

"The Fifth army continued to establish themselves ashore yesterday, beating off several German counter-attacks," Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's ground forces communique said. "The port of Salerno has been captured and steady progress inland is being made."

On the Italian south coast, British forces continued to stream ashore at the Italian naval base of Taranto, which was captured Thursday night, but there was no immediate indication of their next objective.

Wave after wave of Allied medium, light and fighter bombers of the northwest African air forces blasted and strafed enemy-held railways, road junctions, bridges and airfields in the Naples area in support of the ground forces.

Night bombers climaxed the round-the-clock offensive last night with a raid on the road junction of Formia, 45 miles north of Naples, while fighter-bombers were credited with destroying a large number of vehicles at another road junction above Lagonegro, 90 miles south of Naples.

Eighteen enemy planes were shot down yesterday, while 10 planes from the northwest African air forces were lost.

American Liberator bombers from the Middle-Eastern command in daylight yesterday raided the satellite landing ground at Foggia, 80 miles east of Naples, for the third straight day, concentrating on the eastern dispersal area of the Palmori airfield. However, haze and clouds prevented accurate observation of results.

Considerable fighter opposition was encountered, but on a scale greatly reduced from the preceding days. One intercepting fighter was shot down. All bombers returned safely to base.

The escape of the Italian warships to Malta was revealed in a special communique that implied the force included all seven Italian battleships. Consisting of only one sentence, it said:

"The battleships, some cruisers and certain other units of the Italian fleet arrived at Malta."

The warships apparently sailed to Malta in response to the orders of Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, Allied naval commander in the Mediterranean, to the Italian fleet Thursday to put into Allied ports to prevent seizure by the Germans.

(A dispatch from the Spanish frontier town of La Linea said two Italian light cruisers, two destroyers and two other units, apparently aircraft carriers, had entered Gibraltar shortly before noon yesterday. One Italian merchant ship also entered the port, the dispatch said.)

While there was no immediate word as to the port from which the Italian flotilla sailed, its arrival was announced only a little more than 24 hours after British naval and ground forces seized the naval base at Taranto on the Italian south coast.

However, at last reports only about half the Italian fleet was based at Taranto and the remainder at Spezia on the northwest coast. German broadcasts yesterday admitted that the Spezia-based warships had escaped, but claimed that Nazi planes sank one battleship and a cruiser and damaged badly another battleship, another cruiser and a destroyer.

The Italian battleships comprised the 35,000-ton Littorio, Vittorio Veneto, Impero and Roma and the 23,622-ton Giulio Cesare, Caio Duilio and Andrea Doria. At least three of the warships, including the Littorio and Vittorio Veneto, have been damaged by British torpedo attacks, but it was possible that the damage since had been repaired.

The Littorio class warships were the pride of the Italian fleet, with nine 15-inch guns and a speed exceeding 30 knots. The Cesare class battleships were built before the World war, but subsequently were re-constructed.

The escape of the Italian warships to Malta clinched Allied control of the Mediterranean. Though the Axis had not seen fit to challenge Allied mastery in the inland sea since the fall of Tunisia, the mere presence of the Italian fleet obliged the Allies to keep strong units of their own at hand. Now, presumably, some of the warships can be released for service in other waters, including the Pacific.

Delayed reports boosted the Flying Fortresses' bag of enemy fighters over Foggia last Tuesday to 38.

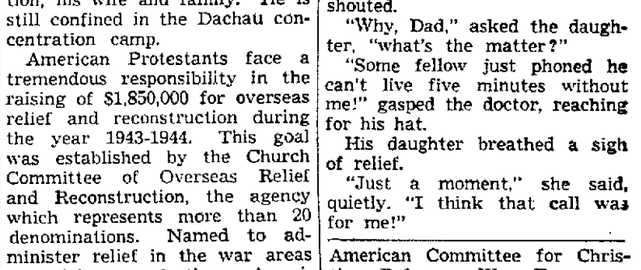
"LOOK FOR THE NEON CROSS"

John Quincy Adams said, "So great is my veneration for the Bible, that the earlier my children begin to read it the more confident will be my hope that they will prove useful citizens and respectable members of society."

Andrew Jackson said, "The Bible is true. Upon that sacred volume I rest my hope of eternal salvation through the merits of our Blessed Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

The Bible is the church's one text book, and to be a lover of the Bible is to make much of the church. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

—D. Carl Yoder.



Dr. William Barrow Pugh, successor to Bishop A. W. Leonard, chairman of the general commission on Army and Navy chaplains, is now making an overseas trip, who like Bishop Leonard, will visit our armed forces giving special attention to the work of the chaplains. There are 30 denominations heading up in the general commission of Army and Navy chaplains.

According to the LINK, bulletin of the Russian Missionary Service, 360,000 gospel tracts have been published in the languages, Russian, Ukrainian, and Polish, and most of them have been distributed. The co-operation of the Slavish workers of the different denominations has been praiseworthy. The financial report of the Russian Missionary society shows that during the past ten years the sum of $90,172 has been collected for missionary work among the Russians. Rev. I. V. Neprash is director of the work.

The shadow of the cross is still cast over Germany. Many noble men of God continue to suffer for their faith. Pastor Martin Niemoeller, German confessional church leader, began his seventh year of imprisonment on July 1. He has no hope whatever of being released under present conditions. Only an Allied victory can free this man to his noble vocation, his wife and family. He is still confined in the Dachau concentration camp.

American Protestants face a tremendous responsibility in the raising of $1,850,000 for overseas relief and reconstruction during the year 1943-1944. This goal was established by the Church Committee of Overseas Relief and Reconstruction, the agency which represents more than 20 denominations. Named to administer relief in the war areas are eight organizations: American Bible society, Bureau for Inter-Church Aid, American Friends Fervice committee, International Missionary council, American Committee for Christian Refugees, War Emergency and War Victim Fund of the Y. W. C. A., War Prisoners Aid of the Y. M. C. A., Church Committee for China Relief.

Motives produce impulses; impulses produce deeds. If your main motive is to make a living, all your deeds will be of the "Bread and Butter" variety. If your motive is to make a better world, your deeds will be expressions of God-given ideas—the highest welfare of others.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"I am playing a game, matching my wits against theirs," Mary went on reading with the help of the old code book. "They think I am now on their side, really trying to help them. If I can get them to trust me to flash what they will think are my own signals, perhaps you can board the pirate ship in time to rescue me. Watch for the signals'."

She laid down the paper, and looked at me appealingly.

"This is what the 'gold bracelet' meant in her old code," she said, "and of course she had to use what was nearest to what she wanted to say. But what do you suppose she means by signals?"

"Perhaps she was making a signal today when she sent this message," I said slowly. "Perhaps she means for us to watch the vicinity of that restaurant. I can't help but think her prison is somewhere near there. They never would risk taking her far away from where they are keeping her."

"I think you have something there," Mary said. "And I'll bet Grandpa Spencer, without even knowing anything about this is already planning to keep it in view."

"Go to the head of the class!" I told her, smiling with an effort, because I felt that Mary and I could do with a bit of lightness. "And now were you able to do anything with the other two clues?"

"Was I!" she rejoined. "Just listen to this, coming at the end of the key words through which I dragged the 'opal ring!'

"'I have made a great mistake in judgment'," Mary read. "'I never would have been on this ship if I had taken advice instead of making a decision for myself. Now, if I am only given another chance, which I doubt, I will put myself in the hands of my friends, and rely entirely upon them'."

A Surge of Relief.

My hand went up to my throat in the surge of relief that seized me. If this meant anything, it meant that Marion at last had realized that voluntarily putting herself into the hands of the gangsters to shield Carolyn, or some one else dear to her, as we believed she had done, was a terrible mistake, and that she would now hold herself in readiness to aid our attempts to rescue her instead of balking them as we had feared she might do.

Mary saw the gesture and flashed me an understanding glance of sympathy.

"I know," she said. "That gets rid of the worst headache of all. It's one thing to rescue a docile damsel from the hands of brutal captors and quite another to have to snatch the gal while she's kicking and screaming to be left in her chains."

I relaxed, with the half-protesting smile I generally accord Mary's slangy phraseology, and she took up the fourth sheet of paper.

"The last is the best of the lot," she said. "Grandma's amber necklace' stems through to this:

"'I understand the signals you sent me awhile ago from that ship, but the others didn't and fired on you. Now I am wigwagging a message back to a strange ship I see in the offing. I hope it is a friendly one. If you get this message you will know I am still on the same ship. Try to get near enough to it to signal me again'."

My body came to attention with my brain, and I straightened myself in my chair.

"This is indeed wonderful," I said. "It means that she read those newspaper personals we inserted. It also, I assume, tells us as best she can that she is near that restaurant, or will be in it again. But what does 'the others fired on you' mean?"

"I don't think it means anything," Mary replied promptly. "You see, these old codes were ones Marion worked out when she imagined herself a prisoner on a pirate ship, and of course I have to present them verbatim. We'll have to read her mind to get some of her meanings."

Not Hard to Do.

"That doesn't seem hard to do," I said, "and, at last, we have something from which we can work. We ought to get it into Father's hands as quickly as possible, but I don't want to take any chance of the waiter overhearing."

My father's knock on the door punctuated my sentence. As I opened it he gestured me aside, came through and closed the door.

The waiter has just brought up the luncheon," he said. "Better come out and eat now. And what progress are you making?"

"The best," I returned. "Mary has the message translated in full, and I am sure it will help tremendously."

"That's wonderful news," he said. Then he considered a second, his eyes apparently focused upon the window behind us.

"Better leave the papers here," he said. "Lock them in the desk, Margaret. Then after luncheon, with the waiter gone, we'll take them up."

American Beauty Blooms In African Desert Sands

WACs keep spruce, even under difficulties of life in Africa. Above, washing up in barracks, are (l. to r.): Pauline Jeanne Suty, of Klamath Falls, Ore; Margaret R. Griffin, of Charleston, W. Va., and Jeanette C. Schomer, of St. Paul, Minn.

By BETTY CLARKE
(AP Beauty Editor)

A V-Mail letter this morning relates that the WACs in North Africa are keeping themselves well groomed and prettier, perhaps, than they did back home.

Despite the difficulties of keeping beauty and charm alive on the desert, more than 300 WACs who arrived in North Africa determined to help out in military ways knew that they had to preserve their feminine qualities and American attractiveness.

Several popular American beauty shops were discovered, much to the surprise of the girls—and the line formed to the right, from the very first day.

The army's post exchange carries a full line of lotions, creams and powder and few of the girls neglect that "hundred nightly strokes with the hairbrush."

Fingernails which have to be kept fairly short are manicured and kept nicely polished.

One of the very first requests was for full length mirrors in the barracks and the words "check your appearance" appear on the mirrors as constant reminders.

The crisp, starched spruceness of the WACs, the result of frequent washing and ironing of uniforms, is said to have created a miraculous change in the enlisted men since their arrival.

The girls realize that they are under constant scrutiny and want to do their best to have that "bandbox look" that American women are noted for.

American girls here at home who can turn on a faucet for hot or cold running water, and who have every beauty preparation they'd like at their disposal might well appreciate these conveniences and take proper advantage of them.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, September 12.

Sunday's horoscope is a splendid one for stabilizing the affairs and is particularly propitious for the church, clergy, and all those of a studious or profound state of mind and character. Possessions also show increase and security. But in romantic or domestic affairs there is a separative influence of estrangement.

Those whose birthday it is will enjoy a year of excellent success in putting the affairs and the fortunes on a sound and enduring basis. There may be increase in investments, accumulations, real estate, or perhaps a legacy or substantial gift. In domestic, social or romantic attachments there is sign of separation, disruption or other regrettable event, unless faithfully safeguarded.

A child born on this day will have a studious and sturdy character, with practical ability. It may be less stable and fortunate in its romantic life.

For Monday, September 13.

Monday's astrological forecast is a rather conflicting one, with much promise of affairs being put on a sound and enduring basis by the use of certain peculiar talents, by mystical or psychic lead or insight rather than the keen logic or reason. Prudent and discreet conduct may avert quarrels. Many perplexing or obscure phases may negative domestic happiness or success.

Those whose birthday it is, although having stability of character and sound intentions, yet may be influenced by psychic tendencies, emotional disturbances or other obscure or chaotic proclivities. These may react unfavorably on domestic happiness or solidarity. Be discreet, prudent and reasonable, particularly in romantic affiliations and there may be some constructive benefits.

A child born on this day will have excellent quantities, which should be directed into practical channels, with regulation of psychic or mystical talents.

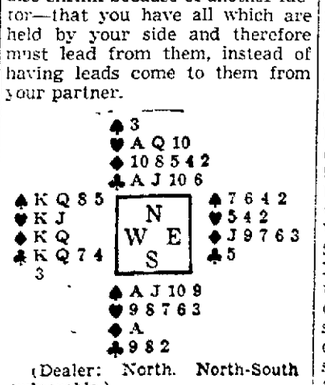
"The Authority on Authorities"

POSITION VALUE VAGUE

VALUING YOUR cars on a basis of their position in relation to those indicated by opponents' bids is risky business. It may turn out that the man at your right had bid a topless suit, and his partner has the honors in it sitting over yours. Penalty doubles founded on position value may therefore prove costly. The trick-taking power of your cards may also shrink because of another factor—that you have all which are held by your side and therefore must lead from them, instead of having leads come to them from your partner.



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♥	2 ♣
2 ♥	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	Pass	Dbl

North was tempted to double West's 2-Clubs, and would have done so if vulnerability had been reversed. As it was, he took a chance on his partner's heart suit being of five cards, and raised it in the hope of gaining the great value of a vulnerable game.

West, for his double, of course had visions of a trick in hearts, as he sat at the left of the heart bidder, and also thought he would get the equivalent of at least one trick from each of his king-queens, perhaps two in one or more cases. It looked like a juicy set to him, but was not.

The club K lead went to the A, and South at once led to his diamond A, then finessed the heart Q and ruffed a diamond. The heart A dropped the K and a second diamond was ruffed. The club 9 was led to the Q, and West led back a club which East ruffed with the defenders' last trump. When the spade 2 was returned, South played the 9 to force the Q. Now West could lead either into the spade tenace or a club to the dummy's J. He did the latter, the spade 10 being discarded. Now a diamond was ruffed, the spade A scored and the spade J ruffed by the heart 10, making game.

Landis Appointment Hints Balkan Blow

WASHINGTON — (UP) — Appointment of James M. Landis as President Roosevelt's personal emissary to the Middle East gave new impetus today to speculation that an Allied invasion of the Balkans is imminent.

Landis, who resigned yesterday as civilian defense director to assume the new post, also will be this country's economic and civilian chief of supply for the Middle Eastern area.

He expects to leave soon for Cairo, fountainhead of supply for Allied forces in the Middle East where three British armies and an undisclosed number of American troops are deployed—possibly for thrusts in the Balkans.

When he announced his retirement, Mr. Beverstock said "In most cities of this size, two or three deputy stations are set up to handle the sales but our quarters and management have been so agreeable that no objections to our set-up have been made and no requests for other stations during rush periods."

Another of the auto club projects developed under Mr. Beverstock's administration was the schoolboy patrol. In that he was assisted by Frend Boals, now city traffic commissioner, but then a mounted police officer for the Auto club.

He also was intensely interested in Safety Town, a project carried out by Boals on the city's playgrounds during summer months, when children operated miniature automobiles — made available by the Auto club, and learned the fundamentals of traffic regulations. The fame of Safety Town spread over the nation.

Sport Podge by REX HESS

This week's Sporting News has an interesting yarn on Gene Woodling, ex-Mansfield Brave, proving that the nice things reported in this corner recently regarding the Ohio State league batting leader of 1940 were strictly on the up.

To save me a day's work, and to give you the dope straight from the feed box, here's the yarn as it appears in the Sporting News:

* * *

By HOWARD W. DAVIS
(Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Sunday Independent)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa.

Stocky Gene Woodling, hard-hitting Wilkes-Barre outfielder, will don a Cleveland Indian outfit after the eastern league curtain is rolled down, September 12, but he has one important matter to attend to before joining up with Lou Boudreau's troupe. That is, to win his third batting title in his third full season in organized ball. And he has a good chance to realize this ambition.

The hustling Baron outfielder, who was purchased by the Indians on September 2, was hitting .349, according to the latest figures compiled by the Munro Elias Baseball bureau, and while he does not have an unsurmountable lead, there appeared little chance of any of his rivals overtaking him as the season neared the finish.

* * *

Encouraged by the report of the Indian scouts, Boudreau, according to Cleveland dispatches, plans to insert the chunky slugger into the outfield on his arrival.

* * *

Although Woodling is only five feet nine and one-half inches tall and tips the scales at 170, he packs plenty of power from the port side of the plate. Among his first 143 hits, 30 were doubles, six triples and four home runs. Since Albany's Bill Nagel, the home-run leader of the EL, only had nine to his credit at the time, that is a respectable showing. Batting second most of the season, Gene has punched in 48 runs for Wilkes-Barre.

In the field, Woodling leaves little to be desired. He covers the Barons' center portion of the outer garden as well as any youngster seen here in years. He has plenty of speed and possesses a rifle arm.

* * *

Gene, only 20, started playing with Akron East high school. He joined the Goodyear Rubber semi-pro club while in school and performed in the outfield in 1937-38-39. He hit .452 there one year and attracted the eyes of Bill Bradley, Cleveland scout.

Woodling spent his first season with Mansfield in the Ohio State league, where he hit .398 to lead the loop. He collected 132 hits, of which 29 were doubles, six triples and four homers in 85 games. He was picked on the all-star team.

* * *

The next season brought him a promotion to Flint of the Michigan State league, where Gene again topped the circuit with a .394 mark. He punched out 152 hits, including 30 doubles, five triples and seven homers.

* * *

Last year, Woodling joined the Barons and got off to a poor start, although he was coming along in June when he was forced out of action, following a slide home. It was a squeeze play with the batter missing the ball. In the mixup, Gene came up with a broken leg, which ended his playing for the year.

He is married to the former Betty Nicely from Akron and they're expecting a blessed event in the fall.

Zivic Reconsiders His Retirement

NEW YORK — (AP) — Crafty Fritzie Zivic, who reportedly has been thinking of quitting the ring, needn't retire as long as he meets fighters of the Vinnie Vines type.

The 30-year-old Pittsburgh veteran bopped Vines to dreamland in 2:04 of the first round of their scheduled 10-round windup bout at Madison Square Garden last night.

"There was nothing to it," declared Zivic. "I can keep on fighting until I'm 50 if I meet boys like im."

Yankees Return to Slugging

Get 41 Hits In Last Three Winning Games.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

THE New York Yankees, who have stayed on top the American league all season chiefly because of their superb pitching, suddenly have started to terrorize their foes with their hitting.

* * *

In winning their last three games they have made 12, 15 and 14 hits, respectively, and looked like the Bronx Bombers of other years in their ability to stir up big innings.

* * *

They scored six runs in the ninth inning against the Philadelphia Athletics while capturing the second half of their Labor Day double-header, they rolled up five in the sixth inning against the Red Sox Thursday and they broke loose for seven in the eighth frame yesterday to beat Boston again, 9-3.

The victim of their latest uprising was Cecil (Tex) Hughson, who had whipped the Yankees in three successive starts early in the season.

* * *

The St. Louis Cardinals also won yesterday, but had to wring out a 2-1 decision over the Chicago Cubs on the strength of a double by Stan Musial in the seventh.

* * *

Cincinnati remained in second place in the National league by half a game over the idle Brooklyn Dodgers bw dividing a twilight-night double-header with Pittsburgh.

The New York Giants walloped the Boston Braves 10-2 with a 15-hit offensive while Van Mungo and Johnny Allen shared a four-hit pitching performance.

* * *

The Cleveland Indians reinforced their hold on second place in the American league by sweeping a double-header from the Detroit Tigers 4-2 and 1-0.

* * *

Washington whipped the Philadelphia Athletics 5-0 with Early Wynn pitching a tree-hit classic and the St. Louis Browns stopped the Chicago White Sox 6-2 at Chet Laabs hit his 16th homer and Nelson Potter produced a six-hit hurling job.

FIVE FOOTBALL TILTS ON SCHEDULE TODAY

NEW YORK —(AP)— Today, in normal times, would have been the first Saturday of football practice. But these are abnormal times and it is the opening of the gridiron season with five games on the docket.

* * *

Tops on the abbreviated card are the Camp Grant at Illinois tussle and Muhlenberg's visit to the Yale bowl. The others find Baldwin-Wallace of Ohio, at Rochester university; Ursinus at Swarthmore, and Presbyterian college of Clinton, S. C., playing the Fort Mackson 59th Signal Battalion.

The brief card was preceded by a pair of games last night in which Central Michigan Teachers defeated Alma college 13 to 6, and Peru, Neb., Teachers trimmed Rosecrans Field at St. Joseph, Mo., 7 to 0.

FIELD OF 17 TEAMS ENTERED IN TOURNEY

YOUNGSTOWN —(AP)— Transportation difficulties and the pressure of war work have failed to deplete the entry list of the National Amateur Baseball federation's 30th annual tournament opening today.

The field of 17 teams, including the Detroit Auto club, last year's titlist, equals the 1942 enrollment. Play will be conducted on a two defeats and out basis with the survivors clashing in a three game series for the championshpi.

24 Teams Open Moose Season

Bowling League Play Gets Under Way.

Moose keglers opened the Mansfield bowling league season last night, taking over the entire Colony layout with a 24- team loop.

Fred Roth, lodge governor, rolled out the first ball. Not satisfied with the result, he also rolled the second, then quit. Both were beautiful gutter balls.

C. Englehorn rolled high series of 581 while Farrell Hipp and Pickles Hipp tied for second with marks of 578. Harold LeMunyon had 576 and Duke Weber, 573. T. Hempfield turned in high game of 230.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Mel Ott has a new three-year contract to manage the Giants and, in our opinion, he'll have a three-year headache just like this year's unless he makes up his mind to become a bench manager. . . . That isn't to say Ottie is washed up as a ball player, but as boss of the Giants he'll not only have to handle the club on the field but also plan out any steps to strengthen the club, keep tabs on minor league prospects and do practically everything but sell tickets. . . . And nobody can handle all those jobs and play a good ball game too. . . . Of course, the situation may be improved if the story is true that Leo Miller, the Syracuse Chiefs' business manager, will move into the Giants' front office.

ONE MINUTE SPORTS PAGE

Big Ed Levy, army bound, will bid farewell to Newark baseball fans tomorrow by singing a duet with Frankie Hiller . . . then the rest of the International league pitchers will render a chorus of "Working on the Levy." . . . The Red Sox have the best night game fielding average in the American league, but as far as the Yanks are concerned that might as well be whistling in the dark. . . . Cleveland's Al Sutphin explains that he wouldn't bring his Barons into the National hockey league this year because (1) He wouldn't desert Buffalo, which was refused Sunday night dates, and (2) The league wanted a guarantee that Cleveland never would quit, regardless of losses. . . . The Detroit Lions' roster shows 14 coaches and one athletic director—what? No Monday A. M. quarterbacks?"

SHORT SPORT STORY

When Leo Martin, former Massachusetts amateur golf champion, joined the navy he turned over his clubs to Joe Monahan, jr., with the admonition: "Take care of these for me until I come back." . . . Martin, serving with the armed guard on a merchant ship, has been reported missing and Monahan, an army trainee at Harvard, is taking the best possible care of the clubs. . . . He brought them out last week-end and won the C. Y. O. tournament —his first big individual triumph.

The war seems to be making coyotes in Oregon too frisky, since so many of the young men who formerly hunted them have gone to war or into war industries. So the Court of Clackamus County has appropriated $340 to pay a government trapper to go after them.

California again offers its annual September miracle at Pacific Grove off Monterey Bay. Drawn by irresistible migratory urge, millions of beautiful butterflies make the amazing 3000 mile journey from Far North Alaska to California homelands, each autumn. The advance guards come in pairs, then hundreds, then thousands to the swarming millions that blacken the sky for hours. In the spring the butterflies go single and in smaller groups back to the Northland, whence their parents streamed south a few months before. It's the flight of no returns, for the butterflies making the flight it's a one way journey.

As if to prove that they are not extinct in this part of the world, three large manatees, known also as sea cows, put in an appearance in the river at Bradenton, Florida, a few days ago. These rare water-dwelling mammals feed on vegetation, and are so infrequently seen that many believed they were practically non-existent.

Spring Grid Vote Called

Ballots Tabulated Oct. 2 on Practice.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— The future of spring football practice at some 500 Ohio high schools will be decided Oct. 2 when the votes of school principals will be tabulated.

The principals were asked to state whether they favored elimination of football practice between the Saturday after Thanksgiving and Aug. 20.

Commissioner H. R. Townsend of the Ohio High School Athletic association said he learned Mt. Gilead's principal had voted to retain spring practices.

The ballot was recommended by the Ohio High School Football Coaches' association at its spring meeting. The association also went on record as favoring the abandonment of the spring sessions. Later, several high school coaches contended the proposal that principals vote on the question was "railroaded" through the meeting and that at at least half the schools desired to retain spring workouts.

Townsend said arguments for the retention of the practice are that it toughens boys going into military service and gives coaches a chance to look over new material, while opponents say it is hard on depleted coaching staffs and hard-to-get material and the boys do not like it.

DISCUSS PROCEDURE FOR WORLD SERIES

CHICAGO —(AP)— The procedure to be followed in staging the 1943 world's series was the principal business scheduled for discussion today among representatives of the New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals with Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball.

The chief topic up for consideration was the division of the seven-game series between the American and National league pennant winners. The league leading clubs' representatives and Landis also were expected to decide on the official opening date and the site of the first game.

Grimm Likes Cuban Rookie

Julio Acosta Pitches And Bats to Victory.

(By Associated Press)

Charlie Grimm, the Dutch master of the Milwaukee Brewers, was on the Cuban side today, being particularly palsy with one Julio Acosta, his young Cuban rookie pitcher.

Acosta, who joined with the Brewers a couple of weeks ago from Richmond in the Piedmont league, pitched and batted the Brewers to a 2 to 1 victory over St. Paul in the second game of a twin bill last night.

The Brewers needed the victory to maintain a respectable lead over Indianapolis since they lost the first encounter to the Saints by a 6-4 score. The Saints staged a four-run uprising in the seventh inning of the first game to humble the league leaders. The even break put the Brews a full game ahead of the Indians, who lost.

Indianapolis couldn't do much to Ted Wilks' offerings whereas Columbus pounded out 16 hits off three Indian hurlers to defeat the Tribe, 9 to 1. The victory was Wilks' 15th.

Last place Kansas City took a pair from Minneapolis to creep up on St. Paul. The Blues copped the seven-inning first contest, 5 to 4 and made one run in the ninth inning of the afterpiece to break a 5 to 5 tie.

Toledo and Louisville split a twin bill, the Colonels taking the opener, 5 to 0, on the strength of a first inning five-run splurge. The Hens came back to cop the second, 5 to 3.

Girl Listed as Gridiron Fullback

NEW CASTLE, Ind. —(UP)— Miss Agnes Rifner is listed as a fullback on the roster of the New Castle high school football team.

But Agnes, 16, blond and pretty, is not a line plunger. Here is an equally valuable specialty—kicking points after touchdowns.

Coach Griz Baker discovered her talent at freshman gym class a year ago and ordered her out for the team. Now she splits the uprights better than four times out of five.

ON THE LEVEL, PINKY, WHAT'S BEEN YOUR RACKET, SINCE YOU QUIT THE CIRCUS AS A COOK?··· YOU CAN TELL ME,···WE'RE BOTH MEMBERS OF THE SAME LODGE,···I CAME HERE ON ONE WING WITHOUT A CENT, TOO!
MY LAST VENTURE WAS MANAGING A PAIR OF BOXERS WHO WERE SIAMESE TWINS! THE OPPONENT COULDN'T BEAT BOTH OF 'EM AT THE SAME TIME! HE MIGHT GET THE DECISION FROM ONE, BUT LOSE ON POINTS TO THE OTHER TWIN!··· BUT THEY QUIT THE GAME, AND I BECAME PARTNER WITH A GUY ON A PRESERVED WHALE, AND WE WENT BROKE!

GOUGES ON BEER, MUST PAY $700

Tavernkeeper Violates Ceiling Price, Soldiers Catch Him.

OMAHA —(AP)— Municipal Judge Dennis O'Brien has ordered Angelo Digiacomo, tavern operator, to pay $700 damages to seven soldiers from Ft. Omaha for allegedly charging them 56 cents more than the ceiling price on 14 bottles of beer.

Judge O'Brien, in the first judgment in Omaha courts under the triple damages section of the federal price control law, ruled also yesterday that Digiacomo must pay $140 to the soldiers' attorney, Hugh Boyle.

Boyle said that although the OPA ceiling price on the beer was 11 cents, the soldiers were charged 15 cents.

THEATERS

Army Nurse Film.

Claudette Colbert, Veronica Lake, and Paulette Goddard are co-starred in "So Proudly We Hail" which starts today at the Ohio. The picture is based on the heroic adventures of a group of U. S. Army nurses who emerged from the holocaust of Bataan and Corregidor where they fought and loved and lived to the thunder of Jap guns. The nurses are portrayed by the three lovely stars, each of whom is said to be superb in her role, rising to new and thrilling dramatic heights.

Filmusical Continues.

Continuing at the Madison theater is the filmusical, "What's Buzzin' Cousin?" Ann Miller's dancing, Freddy Martin's sweet music and Rochester's uproarious fun all combine to make the picture good entertainment. Added to the music and mirth are gangsters, a ghost town and a gold rush. Second feature on the Madison bill is "Frontier Badmen," a thrilling melodrama. The film tells the story of pioneer cattlemen who drove huge herds along the dangerous Chisholm trail to the primitive market settlements in Kansas.

Musical Hit.

"Presenting Lily Mars" starring Judy Garland and Van Heflin. It is a musical hit for the entire family with the orchestras of Tommy Dorsey and Bob Crosby. Co-feature is "Blazing Guns" starring Hoot Gibson and Ken Maynard.

Showing at Park.

"Jacare" starring Frank Buck, is showing at the Park theater. This is the first picture ever filmed in the wilds of the Amazon jungle. "Bad Man From Thunder Gap" with Dave O'Brien and Jim Newill is the co-feature.

ALL LOMBARDY IN NAZI HANDS, KING IN SICILY

Neutral Reports of Widespread Allied Victories Are Called Premature.

ports of Genoa and Spezia. Trieste was said to have been captured after a short fight.

The Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet said the Allied convoy which was sighted yesterday moving into the Adriatic sea in the direction of Albania had changed course and landed troops at Brindisi, on the east coast of the Italian heel opposite Taranto, Italian naval base occupied Thursday night by the British.

The arrival of the Italian king, queen and crown prince in Sicily also was reported in Svenska Dagbladet, which said they were believed to have reached Palermo, presumably the "new seat of the Italian government."

Whereabouts of Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio were not known. Rome radio said yesterday that he had left the capital for "miliary inspections" and a later Paris broadcast asserted that he had departed by plane for an unknown destination.

The Daily Express diplomatic expert, Guy Eden, said Mussolini still was in Italy and would be turned over to the Allies to be held for trial as a war criminal before a court of international lawyers.

Svenska Dagbladet quoted Italo-Swiss border rumors that Badoglio would resign soon in favor of former Prime Minister Ivanhoe Bonomi, a social democrat who was forced into retirement by Benito Mussolini.

Gen. Vittorio Ambrosio, chief of the Italian general staff, also was said to have flown to Palermo, together with a group of Allied officers who arrived in the Italian capital only 24 hours earlier.

Svenska Dagbladet sought to climb down from its earlier reports of landings at widely scattered points along the Italian west coast with a dispatch asserting that they were only "test operations," after which the forces re-embarked and withdrew.

Reliable information reaching Madrid said that Rome was quiet following announcement that German troops would occupy only the German embassy, the broadcasting station, the telephone exchange and other key points while the bulk of the Nazi forces remained outside the city despite its surrender.

There were reliable reports, Madrid said, that Badoglio at a final cabinet meeting before leaving Rome sent an ultimatum to Germany declaring that Italy would declare war on Germany if Nazi troops occupied Rome, if a bogus national Fascist government continued to enjoy German support, and if German troops interfered with the movement of Italian troops through Italy, the Balkans and France.

The London Daily Sketch listening post said it heard an official announcement that Italy had declared war on Germany.

Gen. Vittorio Ruggero, Italian commander in chief of the Milan area, broadcast over the Milan radio early today that all organized Italian resistance in Lombardy province had ceased following German occupation of all important cities except Milan, Como and Varese, which, however, also had surrendered.

Ruggero asked the Lombardy population to cease all resistance to the Germans and to hand over arms and ammunition under penalty of execution if they failed to comply.

A Zurich dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph agency said extreme anti-German demonstrations had broken out in Milan with crowds storming business and private homes owned by Germans.

Despite official German reports that Italian resistance was broken with comparative ease, frontier advices said Italian civilians, police and firemen joined in fighting the Nazis, at places cutting them off from supplies and slowly annihilating them. Particularly fierce fighting was reported from Trieste, where the populace was said to have fired on the Germans from rooftops and houses.

The Italian population also is aiding American and British troops against the Germans in the Naples-Salerno area, frontier reports said.

An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Zurich said Italian army units in Rumania had been disarmed and placed in special camps under German and Rumanian guard.

Warns Hitler Talk Held Strong Appeal

LONDON —(AP)— Britons were warned by the London Times today not to underrate the force of Adolf Hitler's appeal yesterday to the German soldiers and people.

In an editorial, the newspaper declared that the German leader's address, his first in six months left no doubt that the Germans intend to fight strongly to maintain their hold on Italy and that the capture of Rome suggests they plan a defense line in that area.

"It was the most direct of Hitler's speeches," the Times' diplomatic correspondent wrote. "He lied about the origins of the war, but even then he did not indulge in spasms of self-pity . . . almost his only promise was his assertion that Germany would be avenged for the air raids . . . So far as words can spur the Germans to fresh efforts it cannot be ignored."

Hitler told the German nation that the Italian surrender was of slight importance and that the "ring of steel forged by the German home front will never break."

"We may have to cede some territory," Hitler conceded, then declared the German army would be able to guard the nation from all assaults except the British-American bombing attacks.

"But," he said, "technical and organizational means are growing which will not only break the enemy's air attacks forever, but will retaliate with other and more effective means."

PRICE PRAISES NEWSPAPER AID

Expresses Government Thanks For Voluntary Co-operation Under Censorship Code.

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO—Byron Price, director of censorship, expressed to the Associated Press Managing Editors meeting today "the appreciation and commendation of the government for this great service" which they have rendered in voluntary cooperation under the wartime censorship code.

"As for the future," he said, "I can not help feeling that your patriotic solicitude will continue to safeguard voluntary censorship.

"By carrying to a conclusion what you have so well begun, you will hasten the day when all censorship will come to its unlamented end."

"Of the many conflicts of interest which arise inevitably in wartime," Price said, "one of the most troublesome is in the field of publication. On the one hand is the military, schooled in the strategic value of secrecy and inclined to subordinate all else to the prosecution of armed combat. On the other hand are those agencies, including the press, which are dedicated to the preservation of certain civil rights, among them the right of free citizens to be informed.

"It is not difficult to justify either of these positions, when they are considered separately. The military has, in a certain sense a directive which supersedes all other directives, namely, to win the war and preserve the life of the nation. The press, on its part, has a traditional obligation to keep national life on a plane which will make it worth preserving.

"Thus sound public policy, in wartime, can not escape certain major readjustments which will bring together, under a working arrangement, conflicting viewpoints."

The voluntary censorship code represents such an adjustment, Price said, and as such is a "virile, aggressive force for victory."

WAR LOANS IN COUNTY PASS HALF MILLION

$164,720 Added on Second Day of Big Drive to Raise $6,060,000 Fund.

WARNING ISSUED

Chairman Says 'Lots of Work Still Ahead' Despite Good Start Toward Goal.

Richland countians added $164,720.25 to the Third War Loan drive goal yesterday making a total of $539,494 sold during the first two days of the biggest war loan drive yet attempted.

That leaves $5,420,506 to come out of the pockets of the 70,000 county residents in the next two and a half weeks if the $6,060,060 goal is to be reached by the end of September.

According to Chairman H G Brunner the drive is "progressing satisfactorily" but he believes there is "a lot of work to be done" in the time left in the drive.

"We have a tough job ahead of us," he said. "It's the biggest thing Richland county people have been asked to do yet for the war effort. We've had so much to be proud of in the first two war loans, let's not fall down on the job this time."

To date 661 persons have subscribed to the drive, but drive officials say there must be many more subscribers since this has been called by the treasury department "the people's loan."

The Teachers' Retirement System today informed drive leaders they would allocate $43,150 of their bond purchases to Richland county. This is a portion of the $3,000,000 total divided among the various counties.

Meanwhile in New York the start of the war loan drive and the news of the surrender of Italy to the Allies shared the spotlight as bond market influences.

Reflecting financial district concentration on the drive to raise 15 billion dollars through the sale of war bonds, corporate and municipal financing operation came to a complete standstill for the first time since the week ended April 16 when the second war loan campaign got under way, it was reported.

'Ready to Fight Japs on Equal Terms'--Patterson

SAN FRANCISCO - (UP)— Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, back from a tour of the South Pacific, said the Allied forces now have received enough materiel to fight the Japanese on even terms.

Patterson and Lt. Gen. William S. Knudsen, production director for the war department, spoke at a press conference upon their return yesterday from a month's inspection tour of bases in Australia, New Zealand, New Guinea and the Solomons.

"We saw no shortages of materiel and heard of none," Patterson said. "We heard demands for more planes and they need more planes out there—but so does every fighting front."

Comic Tabloid Appears for Last Time Today

A lot of little people who have amused News-Journal readers for a long time become war casualties today. They are the characters in the comics which appear in the Saturday tabloid supplement to The News-Journal.

Because of wartime restrictions on the use of newsprint—which is scarce and getting scarcer—The News-Journal is forced to discontinue the Saturday comic tabloid supplement. The "tab" appears for the last time today.

The step is taken regretfully, but in the belief that readers of the paper will be better served if all the available space is devoted to the vital task of presenting the news.

Hundreds of Exhibits At Garden Show

Doors Open Today on Colorful Displays of Victory Gardeners.

Mansfield's Armory was turned into a miniature fairground today as the first Richland County Garden Harvest show opened its doors to the public.

Judging of the hundreds of entries started shortly before noon and was expected to be complete for the opening of the show at 1 p. m. today. Most of the more than 30 colorful booths were in place this morning and bushels of fruit and vegetables were being arranged on display tables.

Flower exhibits spattered the big Armory hall with color and rows of canned goods attracted admiring spectators to booths along walls.

The displays of outstanding garden and orchard produce give convincing evidence that Richland countians did a good job this year in their food campaign. The show is a triumph particularly for Victory gardeners who are displaying vegetables that will make many gardeners wonder how they did it.

One of the highlights of the festival's special attractions is the Blue Star Mothers' club booth in which war souvenirs and son-to-mother gifts are on display. Proud mothers have given prized possessions to the collection, including fine handkerchiefs from the Orient and England, trinkets from the South Seas and Africa and a collection of mahogany articles from Puerto Rico that will be the envy of many festival visitors.

The mahogany articles which include a salad set, fruit bowl, nut cracker, smoking outfit, book ends, and a cocktail set were sent in three shipments to Mrs. Fred Alarca, 275 Park avenue west, by her son Pfc. Camille Alarca, who is stationed in Puerto Rico.

Garden clubs and school groups throughout the county have prepared booths at the show, like those at a county fair, and the civilian defense organizations have an interesting display of their equipment. There's a war bond and stamp booth and another where refreshments and lunch will be sold.

The show will be open until

BOARD NAMED

Three Employed to Appraise Airport Land.

Employment of three Mansfield real estate men and contractors to appraise the 19 parcels of land in the proposed airport expansion site was announced today by Mayor W. J. Locke.

Hired to do the work were M. A. Shaull and W. C. Mansfield, realtors, and Edwin Schmidt, contractor-realtor. They will receive $333.33 each for the work which is expected to require two or three weeks.

Separate appraisals turned in by the men will be used by the city in dealing with the land owners for 1,000 acres the city will need to expand the present airport under the Civil Aeronautics authority program. Title to the land must be in the hands of the city by the end of the year to meet the government requirements.

EDITOR MOVED

Transferred From Position On 'Yank' Newspaper.

NEW YORK — (AP) — An army spokesman said today that Major Hartzell Spence, editor of Yank, army weekly newspaper, had been transferred to other duties, but that the transfer was not the result, as published reports had intimated, of a recent editorial which discussed the post-war role of veterans' organizations.

Lieut. Col. Franklin S. Forsberg, officer in charge of the publication, said that Spence's removal was "routine transfer."

CRASH KILLS BELLVILLE BOY

Dale Shafer, 14, Dies After Auto, Truck Collide on U. S. Route 42.

Dale Eugene Shafer, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Shafer, Bellville R. D. 2, died at Mansfield General hospital at 1:30 a. m. today from injuries sustained when the car he was driving collided with a truck on U. S. Route 42 six and a half miles north of Mt. Gilead.

State patrolmen said the boy, driving north, was evidently on the wrong side of the road when his car collided with a dump truck heading south. The truck owned by Pittsburgh Coke and Iron company was driven by John Holmes, 27, Carnegie.

Holmes was unhurt when the truck turned over several times into a field. Patrolmen set the time of the accident at 12:15 a.m.

The Shafer boy died of a skull fracture, according to Dr. L. B. McCullough, coroner, less than an hour after he was admitted to the hospital.

State patrolmen said the boy had only a restricted driver's permit which is valid only for driving on necessary errands under his parents' supervision.

The body was removed to the Snyder funeral home in Bellville pending funeral arrangements.

(By United Press)

An earthquake that struck a wide section of southwestern Japan yesterday caused at least 1,400 casualties and demolished 4,000 homes in the city of Tortori, where big fires raged, a Tokyo dispatch broadcast by Berlin radio said today.

The dispatch placed the center of the quake about 8 miles from Tortori, on the northern coast of Honshu. Tortori was partly burned, the dispatch said.

An earlier Tokyo broadcast reported by the Office of War Information said rescue parties still were digging in the debris at Tortori for victims.

DEAN OF COUNTY AUTO CLUB DIES

Frank Beverstock, Secretary For 24 Years, Succumbs After Short Illness.

Frank Beverstock, 69, whose many years of service as secretary of that organization earned him the moniker of "father of the Richland County Auto club," died at General hospital today, 24 hours after he was taken ill at his farm home near Lexington.

Mr. Beverstock, who was secretary of the Auto club for 24 years, complained of not feeling well yesterday morning. He was taken to the hospital for treatment, his condition growing steadily worse until death came at 9 a. m. today. He would have been 70 next Dec. 30.

Since retiring last March 1 "to go back to the farm and raise cattle" as he announced it then, Mr. Beverstock had been doing just that on his farm on the Lexington-Bellville road.

He assumed the secretaryship of the Auto club on Aug. 10, 1919, and saw the membership grow from 340 to a high of 2,700 in the late 1920's and a present membership of 2,500.

One of the things in which Mr. Beverstock took the greatest pride was the fact that for years the Auto club had been

ALLIED CHIEFS SEND PROMISE TO ITALIANS

FDR, Churchill Say Nation to Regain Place of Honor If People Fight Nazis.

'CLEANSE SOIL,' PLEA

Message to Marshal Badoglio Says Now Is Time to Strike Germans.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON - President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill today promised the Italian people that Italy will be returned to an honorable position among the free nations of the world if Italians will do their part in "cleansing Italian soil of the German invaders."

The promise of a free Italy was made in a joint message sent by the two Allied leaders to Marshal Pietro Badoglio and the Italian people.

The chief executive and prime minister, in calling upon Italians everywhere to rise up and take arms against the Nazis, asserted that powerful American and British armies are coming to Italy's rescue.

They warned the Italians that Hitler "threatens to subject you all to the cruelties he is perpetrating in so many lands."

American and British armies are now striking into Italy at many points up and down the length of the Italian peninsula to crush the Nazi armies, Italians were assured.

"The German terror in Italy will not last long," the two leaders promised.

"Now is the time for every Italian to strike his blow," declared the message to Marshal Badoglio, which was widely broadcast in the Italian language on channels beamed to Italy.

"The liberating armies of the western world are coming to your rescue.

"We have very strong forces and are entering at many points.

"The German terror in Italy will not last long.

"They will be expatriated from your land and you, by helping in this great surge of liberation, will place yourselves once more among

Yanks, British Take Salerno; King In Sicily

Neutral Reports of Allied Victories All Along Coast Held Premature.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (U.P.) — Military sources reported today that Italians still were resisting the Germans in Rome despite Berlin claims that the city had capitulated and that "tenacious fighting" was in progress.

(By United Press)

LONDON — All Lombardy province in northern Italy, including Milan, followed Rome in surrender to the Germans, an Italian broadcast acknowledged today, and a Swedish dispatch said King Victor Emmanuel, Queen Elena and Crown Prince Umberto have fled to Sicily.

Other roundabout reports reaching London from Sweden and Switzerland said Allied armies have captured Naples, Salerno, Spezia, Leghorn, Civitavecchia and Gaeta on the Italian west coast, as well as the island of Sardinia. An Allied landing at Ostia, the port for Rome, 15 miles to the west also was reported.

However, all these purported victories appeared at least premature since the only confirmed Allied landings on the west coast occurred some distance south of Naples and there has been no authoritative information to indicate that the U. S. Fifth army has approached even the outskirts of Italy's third largest city.

A special German communique yesterday reported that Nazi troops have taken over Rome, the Naples-Salerno area and most of northern Italy, including the Brenner Pass, the Bologna, Verona and Cremona areas and the northern coast including the ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA — (U.P.) — Soon after escaping from German-dominated ports in northern Italy, Italian warships fought a half-hour battle with German bombers which attacked them off the island of Corsica and sank one battleship.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (INS) — The German agency DNB declared today that a new landing of American troops has taken place on the Sorrento peninsula south of Naples.

(By United Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa—Allied invasion armies, supported by fleet units, beat back Nazi armored counter-attacks and seized the port and rail junction of Salerno, 30 miles south of Naples, in a powerful drive inland today against heavy opposition.

As the American and British forces battled forward with almost complete aerial and naval superiority, it was disclosed today that the major part of the Italian navy including four battleships, seven cruisers and six destroyers had joined the Allies at Malta after escaping German seizure of northern ports and many cities including Rome.

Heaviest fighting on the Italian front centered around Salerno, where 200 Germans were captured by Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth army, but the British Eighth army in the toe of Italy's boot also advanced 15 miles into the Calabrian bottleneck and reached Maida.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific—A communique said today that Japanese forces trapped at Lae were in desperate straits and that Australian patrols had crossed the Busu river, last strong natural barrier before the enemy's New Guinea coast base.

Allied siege lines ringing Lae were "rapidly closing in on the main citadel of defenses," the communique added.

Hundreds of airborne troops were pouring into the Markham valley daily to reinforce American paratroops and Australian artillery units who had stabilized positions west of Lae and fanned out north and south to prevent any possible escape attempt by the enemy garrison.

Nowhere had the enemy put up strong resistance although 20,000 troops were believed pinned in the area between Lae and Salamaua. Continuous pressure at Salamaua, 25 miles southeast of Lae, prevented the Japanese from breaking out there.

Aerial activity was major communique said.

Mitchell bombers, escorted by fighters swept the New Guinea northeast coast from Alexishafen to Rinsch harbor destroying or damaging 21 enemy barges exploding an ammunition dump and wrecking a group of trucks. Small raids were made on Ambona, Dutch New Guinea, Tanumbar in the Kai islands and the New Britain coastal area. In the Solomons, activity was limited to reconnaissance.

SWAYING: Nazi Lines Shaken By Soviet Capture of Mariupol

(By International News Service)

MOSCOW—Soviet forces, employing tactics used by Anglo-American troops in their sweep through Sicily, caused the entire German line in southern Russia to sway uncertainly today.

The Russians seized the vital Azov sea port of Mariupol, southern anchor of the German line in Russia. In accomplishing this feat, the Soviet forces employed for the first time the "hedge-hopping" procedure of landing from the sea behind the enemy's position.

Hard-riding Cossacks from the Don basin were aided in their frontal assault on the vital base, 65 miles west of recently-liberated Taganrog, by amphibious and airborn Soviet units.

As the Cossacks drove on the city from the east, landing assault troops surged ashore from the sea, causing the German defenders to retreat to relative safety. Similar tactics developed by American, English and Canadian troops under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had repeatedly been used in driving the Axis troops backward on the stepping-stone island of Sicily.

Other important Nazi bastions toppled Friday in a multi-pronged Red army drive that liberated more than 300 towns.

A special order of the day released by Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin announced that among these 300 towns were at least four vitally-important localities. In addition to Mariupol, they included Volnovakha, strategic rail junction 32 miles north of Mariupol; Chaplino, another railway intersection

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON—Wouldn't we do well to make a mental note that Italy's surrender is mainly a triumph of force and not something that happened because we had high ideals or knew a neat diplomatic trick or two?

So long as it was uncertain whether the Allies would win the war, for instance along about a year ago, our high ideals and our diplomatic tricks did us no good in Italy. Only when superior force came into sight did Italy begin to crack.

Clapper

If we keep that clearly in mind and hammer that fact into our understanding while the event is hot, we may spare ourselves much confusion and dangerous optimism. Whatever contagious effect the example of Italy may have on Germany and on Japan will gain its force from the extent to which it appears in those countries that the United Nations will be able to bring crushing force to bear.

* * *

Once, as in the days of the Kellogg peace pact, we tended to believe that right made its own might. It makes us very pleased with ourselves to think, as some are doing now, that Italy's surrender was a triumph or right and justice and all of those noble ideals of democracy and freedom, and that Satan has taken a beating in Italy. He took it only when the United Nations were able to muster convincing force.

Mussolini was not overthrown until after Sicily was invaded and the Allied victory there was an imminent certainty. Whatever the Allies were able to do with psychological warfare to facilitate his overthrow gained its effectiveness because of the background of military force which was being brought to bear.

* * *

When Badoglio took over he wanted an armistice but one that would have kept us out of Italy. He appealed to his people to carry on with the war. If we had not had the force in sight, to go into Italy, Badoglio probably never would have got into Mussolini's shoes in the first place, and he never would have had to accept an unconditional surrender instead of the neutralization of Italy which he first tried to obtain.

* * *

What did the job in Italy was the force built up under General Eisenhower, and the successful landing of it in Sicily, and beyond that, the destruction in Italy by the Allied air force.

Badoglio's telegram to Hitler explaining why he surrenders, probably exaggerates the extent of Italy's helplessness in order to make a better alibi, yet it goes to the heart of the reason why Italy surrendered. Badoglio's description of the destruction or occupation of some of Italy's greatest towns, the paralysis of her industries, the disruption of transportation, and finally the impending invasion of the mainland which was ready at the time the armistice was actually signed, make it understandable why he tells Hitler he had to ask for an armistice to save Italy from complete ruin.

* * *

On our side there has been some squeamishness about the place that force should hold in the United Nations scheme of things after the war. Force has a bad name perhaps because it has been so often used. And with such ruthless effectiveness, by our enemies. But never was force used to finer ends for civilization than against Hitler and Fascist Italy. So long as they were in the ascendant and had the superior force, no nation, however inoffensive, was safe from the most brutal conquest.

CONGRESS DUE TO MAKE CHECK ON MANPOWER

Survey of Military, Industrial Needs Expected to Be First Order of Business.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Congressional leaders returning from summer recess left little doubt today that a new survey of the entire manpower needs of the military and war industry will be the first order of business when congress reconvenes next Tuesday.

Sen. Charles L. McNary of Oregon, senate Republican leader, placed manpower problems at the top of a legislative schedule which includes taxation, foreign relations and price control rollback subsidies.

Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky is also believed to favor a speedy review of the entire manpower situation. He is expected to return to Washington today.

The problem will confront the senate the first day if Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D., Mont., follows through with his avowed intention of calling for an immediate vote on his bill to defer drafting of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers.

The bill now is pending on the senate calendar but if Wheeler seeks its passage the administration is expected to urge instead that the measure be returned to the senate committee on military affairs for a new survey of overall manpower requirements.

There it would be lumped with the suggestion of universal national service legislation on which Sen. Warren R. Austin, R., Vt., already has amassed an impressive record of testimony.

The bill, sponsored in the house by Rep. James M. Wadsworth, R., N. Y., gained new impetus in another quarter when Chairman Andrew J. May, D., Ky., of the house military affairs committee announced his committee plans to re-open the subject immediately.

One high congressional authority, who declined to be quoted, said a survey of over-all needs in the light of recent military successes may solve the entire manpower problem and the related draft of fathers without further legislation.

He expressed a belief that if the surrender of Italy is complete, it may be possible to knock Germany out of the war principally with air power within a year.

COURT MARTIAL HEARS EVIDENCE ON DRINKING

Prosecution to Charge Today That Commander Was Drunk While on Duty.

(By United Press)

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—The prosecution in the court martial of Col. William T. Colman today was scheduled to present testimony that the deposed Selfridge Field commander was drunk on duty at the army's Oscoda, Mich., airbase.

Evidence already has been introduced on the alleged illegal transfer by Colman of 11 enlisted men, including Pvt. (now lieutenant) Benson Ford, son of the late Edsel Ford, and two sons of an official of the Alladin company, Bay City, Mich., which reportedly arranged for the gift of a summer camp to Colman.

Details of Colman's alleged intoxication on the night of April 23 at the Oscoda air base, a subsidiary of Selfridge Field, have not yet been revealed at the trial, although testimony has been heard concerning three other occasions when Colman was declared to be under the influence of liquor.

One of these occasions resulted in shooting of Pfc. William McRae, a Negro soldier by Colman last May 5 and caused an official army inquiry which charged the former Selfridge commander with 29 violations of the articles of war.

Proceedings yesterday centered around the testimony of Harry H. Bennett, director of the Ford Motor company, called to testify concerning the transfer of Ford.

Bennett admitted he had talked to Colman, Lieut. Col. Thomas Lanphier, of Detroit, and the office of Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the army air forces, in an attempt to obtain Ford's transfer to officers' candidate school.

Lanphier told him that young Ford should put in an application in the usual way, Bennett related, and that Colman later wrote a letter to obtain Ford's transfer to Selfridge.

Ford was transferred to Selfridge in Oct., 1942, shortly after his induction. Three months later he was sent to officers' training school. He now is stationed at the Detroit induction center.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEWBURGH — The American taxpayers never will know how much graft or loot they have been compelled to pay to the underworld of the construction racket, including contractors as well as union racketeers as part of the price of conducting this war. The horse has been stolen and there is no disposition on the part of any agency of the federal government to lock the door even now.

Pegler

This area on the west shore of the Hudson river, a region extending down into the political bad lands ruled by Frank Hague in New Jersey, has been a thieves' paradise. They looted the Delaware aqueduct project, a $300,000,000 project, the great Orangeburg embarkation center, five miles square and the flying fields for the United States Military academy.

The unions, principally the horribly corrupt rackets known as the operating engineers and the common laborers, have shaken down thousands of workers without mercy for years and are still at it, although Orangeburg is almost finished now and two gangsters of the common laborers' union have been convicted in the local state court by a dogged but handicapped Assistant Attorney General O'Neill, held over from the Lehman Democratic administration, and given 10 to 20 years in prison.

The vein of graft and extortion is petering out at last and the federal government obviously intends to let the crooks get away with it. A year ago, the war frauds division of the department of justice did send a man up to take a look and he gathered considerable information but he has never been back and when last heard of he had been transferred to duty on an urgent "dried egg case."

The Orangeburg center cost $30,000,000 and Stewart field and its satellites in the general neighborhood, now in its final stages but recently struck nevertheless by the operating engineers, cost $23,000,000, the unions have taken a tremendous toll in initiation fees, permit fees and dues and contractors with trucks and heavy machinery for rent in leveling hills have made their share.

At full force there were 18,000 men employed—working would be an overstatement—on the Orangeburg job and it is admitted that men would hide out and loaf at $1 an hour, straight time for common labor. Informants who worked in and around the project say that it was loaded with men from New York many of them with criminal records, recruited by the racketeers who took tribute of them at so much per head. Some men were fired for loafing but that meant only that others were hired and forced to pay the rackets for permission to work.

The most important individual racketeer has been Joe Fay, the vice president of the Operating Engineers International organization and president of the prevailing local and himself a contractor renting heavy excavating machinery, but he is a strong henchman of Frank Hague of Jersey City who is a powerful New Deal politician and Fay has not been troubled by the department of justice, although he is at present under two state indictments. Another interesting character in the Orangeburg center is Charles H. Prindle, jr., of Central Nyack, N. J., who is chairman of the Rockland county building trades council and of the county branch of the miscalled American Labor party. Prindle's council has general jurisdiction over the Orangeburg jobs and he is the personal possessor of a criminal record, having served time in Elmira reformatory under a sentence imposed in April, 1926, when he was 20, on his plea of guilty of a charge of running a fence for a sale of stolen automobiles. There were four such indictments and a police report on his activities says that he bought stolen cars from the actual thieves for low prices and sold them at a profit to residents of the county. Prindle also was employed on the Orangeburg project, possibly as an electrician, for that is represented to be his trade and he is a delegate of the local electricians' union.

The county prosecutors lack the staff, the money and the incentive, and moreover the unions and the contractors are in politics. The state of New York has done some superficial scratching. But the department of justice of the United States, which has full power and authority and many detective and prosecuting agencies and which is the victim of the looting, has done nothing.

SEES 'OUT' ON POST-WAR PLAN

Bricker Says He'll Shift Program If Court Rules Commission Illegal.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—The program of Ohio's post-war planning commission will go forward regardless of the outcome of a forthcoming court test of the commission's legality, Gov. John W. Bricker declared today.

The program will, if necessary, be turned over to the state development and publicity commission, Bricker said.

Legal authorities in the Capitol have questioned the commission's validity since the legislature in creating it appointed some of its own members to the commission.

Bricker announced the possibility of transferring the program to the development and publicity commission following the refusal of four legislators to serve on a newly-named commission to construct new schools for the deaf and the blind.

The appointees informed the governor they feared their presence on the commission would result in the same confusion as that facing the post-war planning group.

Members of the publicity commission include: Horton Hampton of Cleveland, chairman; Justin Rollman of Cincinnati, Reno Hoag of Marietta, Peter Todsen of Port Clinton, Col. William M. Mumm of Columbus and Dwight D. Hatcher of Toledo.

Up and Down THE STREET

Although she has never seen him and doesn't expect to very soon, Mrs. J. A. Rigby of Balgreen farm near Mansfield has "adopted" an 11-year-old British war waif whose home was destroyed by a bomb. The "adopted" child, Joseph Ince, has just left a hospital in England and was removed to a colony operated under the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children. The little boy's father disappeared soon after the family's home was bombed and the mother was injured. The family thinks he may have enlisted in the armed forces, although nothing has been heard from him. Mrs. Rigby will contribute $15 a month to care for the boy and soon will receive a picture and a brief history of him. She hopes to be able to see him sometime.

In a recent letter to his mother, Mrs. Charles Brown, Dr. Charles G. Brown, with the medical corps of the Persian Gulf command area, enclosed a copy of the Persian Gulf edition of the Yank, army weekly. He had underlined a short paragraph in the paper paying tribute to Mansfield blood donors, "A total of 310 Mansfield, Ohio residents and 155 Ohio State Reformatory inmates donated blood during a visit by the mobile blood donor unit in Richland county." Dr. Brown wrote he is proud of the splendid report from his home town and knows how necessary it is that the work continue.

The hundreds of cans of fruit and vegetables Mansfield housewives are storing away now are no joy to the city garbage department which is having its biggest rush in years. Garbage Superintendent L. L. Linham said his men are hauling 25 tons of waste materials, largely from canning operations, daily from Mansfield back yards, and his department is having trouble keeping up with the supply. Corn cobs and husks are among the most difficult materials to dispose of at the garbage plant and they are making up a large part of the garbage collections these days. "I didn't know there was so much sweet corn in Richland county," Linham said.

NEW SULFAS TO AID WOUNDED

Three Compounds With Iodine Hailed as Effective Against Gangrene.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Development of three new types of sulfa compounds which might aid materially in the recovery of the war wounded was disclosed here today by Dr. Paul Goedrich of the research department of Rutgers University College of Pharmacy, Newark, N. J.

In a paper presented to the 91st annual meeting of the American Pharmaceutical association, Dr. Goedrich reported the new compounds were formed by inter-action of the sulfa drugs with iodine.

Principal property of the parent sulfa-iodine compounds, he said, is their definite spore killing action on cultures of tetanus, gangrene and anthrex. None of the sulfa compounds in use at present exhibit any germ killing action on bacteria cultures in laboratory tests, he added.

Dr. Goedrich, who was unable to attend the convention, stated in his paper the new sulfa compounds had not been tested clinically on wounds but such investigations would "proceed immediately."

Unlike the compounds now in use which he said were selective in local applications on wounds and had no effect in certain types of infections, the research pharmacist asserted the new compounds were effective against all types of organisms.

Edward L. Bernays of New York told the convention a public survey he had conducted for the association showed the nation's druggists should prepare for a "post-war trend of medical care organized on a mass basis."

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

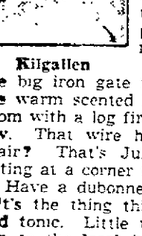
Hi'Ya, Stranger!

(Continuing last week's daytime quick-see of Manhattan with a tour of the night shift.)

* * *

So you want to catch all the high spots, and never mind the expense? Then let's make one of the 52nd street spots the first stop

We'll walk there, because West 52nd street is New York's Montmartre, and you mustn't miss it—the gaudy banners outside the little basement jive joints, the neon signs, the come-on pictures of boo-s-how strippers, the musicians "taking five" in little groups on the sidewalk, the sound of jazz coming from every open door and now and then the melodic whimper of a torch singer wailing about love.



Kilgallen

* * *

It would take you and your girl a week of nights and at least $100 to see everything on this noisy, rowdy street, so this time let's just check in at one place that is neither noisy nor rowdy, "21."

Here we are, going through the big iron gate into the brownstone front, into the warm scented lobby that is just like a living room with a log fire burning and the lamps turned low. That wire haired little fellow tied to the hair? That's Julie Hayden's dog—she's inside sitting at a corner table with George Jean Nathan. Have a dubonnet and sherry cocktail, stranger it's the thing this year. Last year it was gin and tonic. Little things like that make you feel up to the local jive if you hail from a faraway town in Michigan or Arkansas.

No use telling you who all these people in the bar are, but they are solid citizens. Advertising men, owners of radio chains, newspaper publishers, theatrical producers, lawyers who never work unless the fee is heavy, and actors in the very big money.

* * *

You want to see a ballplayer or a prizefighter? Okay, finish your cocktail and we'll go to Toots Shor's around the corner. Looks like a Hollywood place, doesn't it, with all the wood paneling and red leather?

See that young fellow sitting alone at the bar, the one with the chickens on his shoulders? That's Col. Rosie O'Donnell, one of Chennault's heroes—but you know him better as the boy who made that famous run for West Point and beat Navy in as stirring a football game as fans ever saw.

Over there is Mel Ott and his boss, Horace Stoneham, trying to explain to those fellows what a tough break the Giants have had. And here comes Jim Farley, who may buy that ball team yet.

* * *

It's midnight, let's go to a—you never saw a midnight movie? The last one in your town goes on at ten o'clock? Well, we'll take care of that situation. . . . Yes, the price is high. It used to be 55 cents at this hour but every one is tacking it on these days.

Now, how about Reuben's or Lindy's? You can't leave town without having cheesecake at Lindy's, and you shouldn't pass up a chance to sample Chicken Reubenola the restaurant where all the theatrical luminaries and town "characters" gather in the small but interesting hours of the morning.

Want to call it quits now? Had a good time? Well, so long, stranger—glad you liked our town. We'll do it again some time!

WALLACE IDEA CALLED BALLOON

Politicos See Suggestion On FDR As Hint Of Plans.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Vice President Henry A. Wallace's nomination of President Roosevelt for permanent peace conference chairman appeared to some capital politicos today to be a trial balloon hint of new administration plans.

Some political observers took note that Wallace's proposal seemed to take a fourth term for granted. Still others tried to reconcile the vice president's certainty of "peace approaching" with the administration's urgent efforts to convince the country that we are in for a long war.

The other two were injured and were taken to a hospital in Hamilton, eight miles away. Their condition was believed not serious. The bus was sheared in two.

A padlock was knocked off the front door while the back door was left partly open, indicating the thieves had left through it, officers said. The money was in a cash drawer.

From Jake's throat there came a gutteral curse. His hairy hand shifted to the butt of the revolver hanging at his side.

"Keep your shirt on, Jake," snapped his companion. "When the time comes I'll give the word, and it's coming soon—right now, if he doesn't tell me what I want to know."

Bob thought: "It won't last but a moment, a bang and that's all." He looked steadily at Sugg. Then rocked himself upright. "I'll take it standing, Sugg. You do the job. I don't want a cur like Hickory to rub me out."

Greer could be heard leading the horses through the cane brake. A mocking bird flung out its song. Jake swung furiously toward Bob, revolver in hand. Sugg moved back a step. Sugg waved a hand in signal. "All right. Let him have it." His voice was as ice-cold water.

Bob braced himself. A gun boomed through the clearing. Bob blinked. Jake must have missed.

But Jake hadn't missed. His .45 was not smoking. His startled gaze was on the path leading from the bayou.

"Goddlemighty, who's that?" he cried.

Lead whistled through the foliage back of them. Two other explosions came close together.

A man dashed down the trail, feet slapping the wet ground. "They're coming," Cass cried. "Across the bayou."

Bob hurdled a log, running for the shelter of the cypress grove. Twice Sugg fired. The bullets whistled past.

Greer was at the edge of the brake, holding the saddled horses. Jake Hickory made for the big bay, backing away from the red-headed man. Astride its back, he jerked the horse round and disappeared. Cass and Greer followed him.

* * *

Sugg's mind worked in quick flashes. He could save himself now by joining the other outlaws, or he could protect his future by pursuing Lee and wiping out evidence against him. There was more danger in the latter course. He might be shot down by the posse if he stayed. But in the long run the more perilous way might be the safer. Hiram Sugg was never a man to dodge danger. If he could destroy this meddling fool, he had a chance to brazen out the whispers beginning to raise against him. He might still realize the leadership he had mapped out for himself.

As he ran, Bob looked back. He could not see the Hickorys or Greer, though he could hear their mounts threshing through the cane in flight. Sugg was swinging astride his horse and dragging it around to follow Lee.

Bob had one chance, to cut off at an angle into the marshy ground at the right. A horse carrying a heavy man would be handicapped there. Its hoofs would sink deep into the mire.

The mud sucked at Bob's feet, but he did not give it time to set. Sugg's mount came into the swampy ground at a gallop. It bogged down and Sugg drove it furiously, tried to fight it forward. At last he swung from the saddle and ran forward on foot.

Bob angled again to the right into a dense growth of cane. If there was a posse coming up from the bayou he wanted to meet it. Sugg had to eliminate him he knew.

Behind him Bob could hear Sugg breaking through the brush, but the growth was too thick to see him. Dazed from the blow on the head from Hickory's gun, Bob's fet dragged as he ran.

Out of the brake tangle he emerged upon the trail leading to the clearing. At a venture, he turned toward the Bayou. Worn out, he dragged himself around a sharp turn and came face to face with Whit Carson and Cle Hightower. He staggered forward and clung to the mane of the Indian's horse.

"Look out—Sugg!" he panted.

But Sugg did not appear. Carson rode along the path to look for him but he was not in sight.

* * *

Again the Hickorys had escaped. It was useless to follow them into the swamps where they disappeared. There would be small chance of finding them. If Carson stumbled on them he would probably be ambushed. At any rate they had lost their food supply and would have to show themselves somewhere to renew it.

Sugg, too, had eluded the marshal, but it was unlikely that he had found a safe hiding place. Sunk Bayou was unknown ground to him. Filled with quagmires and quicksands the fugitive might wander through the dense vegetation for days without finding a way out.

Battered though he was, Bob was glad to squeeze out of a very close shave.

The three men rode to the ranch house and reported their adventures to Broderick. Sitting on the wide porch, they discussed the problem of running down the Hickorys.

Willie May came out, anger flashing in her eyes. A remark made by the father had drawn her:

"What Bob says settles Sugg's hash. He's the leader of the Hickory gang."

Her glance swept the group and settled on Lee. A handkerchief stained with blood was tied around his head but she ignored this.

"What is it that he says?" she demanded acidly.

There was an embarrassed silence, broken by her father.

"Now you'd better run along, honey," he told her. "This isn't any business for you to worry about."

"I want to know what it is Bob says about Hiram Sugg," she repeated, not lifting her gaze from the cowboy.

"I'm sorry about this," Broderick said reluctanaly. "Fact is, Sugg has gone bad."

"That's what Bob says, is it? So of course it must be true."

The youth looked at her silently.

"Better tell her, Bob," Broderick counseled.

"Unless he is ashamed to say it before me," she added. "Why should he be? After all, Hiram Sugg only saved his life. That is nothing."

"Don't talk that way, daughter," reproved Broderick. "Bob has been right all the way through this. It isn't his fault Hiram tied himself up with a lot of scoundrels."

"Does anybody say so except your precious cowpoke?" she flung out. "Just what is it now that he says, anyhow?"

The father's face grew stern. "When Sugg left here he headed north—said he was going to Atoka to meet a man. Didn't he tell you that?"

"Yes. What of it?"

* * *

"An hour or so later Bob ran on to his horse's tracks going into Sunk Bayou. The trail led across the bayou to the camp of the Hickorys. They caught Bob there. Sugg was with the bandits, apparently their leader. He gave the word for Jake Hickory to kill Bob just as Cle and the marshal got there."

"I don't believe a word of it," the girl cried wildly. "Who besides Bob saw him?"

"We didn't see him, but we found his horse there," the officer said. "It's standing out there in the yard now. Sugg ran into the swamp."

"That's what you say. Maybe Hiram wasn't on the horse. Maybe the Hickorys took it from him. They may have left him lying . . . somewhere." Her voice broke.

"No," her father denied. "He was there with the Hickorys. I'm sorry, Willie May, but we got to face facts. Hiram was in a bad jam. He had to have money and get it quick. Well, he got it. Right after the Santa Fe hold-up he paid off notes for more than eleven thousand dollars."

"He must have got the money some other way." She looked round on them, head still high but clearly shocked. The color drained from her face. "You're all against him because —because—"

Willie May choked. She turned and ran into the house.

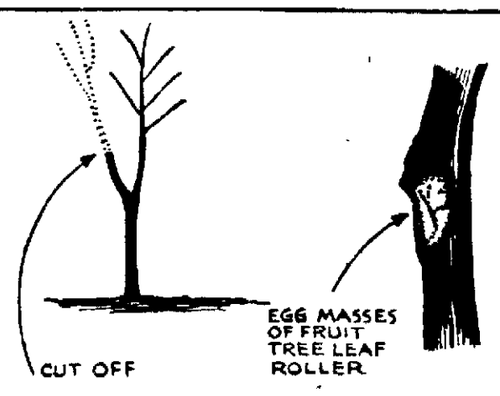
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



9-11

Fall and Winter Safety-First for Fruit Trees In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Released by Central Press Assn.)

Fruit trees in the Victory garden require watchful care even though they have not yet come into bearing. In fact, it is the care they receive as young trees that makes for bountiful crops in the years to come.

One winter task is the pruning of fruit trees, for pruning should be done when the trees are dormant. This means that fruit trees should be trimmed and shaped after their leaves have fallen and before new growth starts in the spring.

The shaping up of fruit trees while they are young is important. Fruit trees, for example, frequently develop V-crotch trunks. This should be remedied by pruning while the tree is young, otherwise, when the tree develops and becomes heavy with a full crop of fruit, the weaker of the trunks is apt to break off during a wind storm.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, one method of pruning to prevent V-crotch is to shorten one of the trunks, leaving it to form a branch while the other trunk continues to grow and in time becomes the main trunk. Another winter job is to spray for the control of leaf roller. As shown in the illustration, these insects winter over in the form of egg masses on the twigs, branches or trunks of a fruit tree. The egg masses are covered over with a smooth coating of dull brown or gray varnish-like substance which protects them not only from the weather but also from the gardener's view unless he or she is on the watch for them. The most effective control is a dormant oil spray applied before the spring growth starts.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

Class Bath Treatments Valuable In Soothing War Taut Nerves

J. F. Class Bath System Cites Success to 16 Minerals.

Making a valuable contribution to the war on "nerves" is the John F. Class Vapo Path Bath system whose health centers dot every section of America.

One of these is located in Mansfield at 144 West Third street. Managed for the past 16 years by F. D. Stotler, this local branch of the nationally known health chain is busy doing its patriotic part in relaxing the war taut nerves of civilians on the Richland county home front with its soothing mineral baths and quieting oil rubs.

Some 25 years ago, John F. Class, an invalid suffering from a so-called chronic ailment, began a series of scientific experiments with certain chemicals which are contained in the body and are therefore essential to its well being.

Combining these chemicals in secret proportion, Class hit upon the formula which not only effected his own recovery but which has been used with so much success on the thousands of devotees of the John F. Class Minerals baths from that day to this.

Mrs. Maude Davidson, for seven years an attendant in the women's department of the local bath parlors, is enthusiastic about the health promoting properties of this famous formula, perhaps because she has noted its effects upon hundreds of patients, from 18 months to 90 years, that have taken the baths under her surveillance.

These 16 minerals, she explains, are found in the vapor which envelops the body of the patient in the bath cabinets, permeating the pores, cleansing them of injurious waste and returning to the body in proper proportion the minerals it requires for functioning most efficiently.

Such a bath is pleasant and relaxing, but not in the least weakening, for the reason that the sterile cabinets are thermostatically controlled and always kept below body temperature.

Mrs. Davidson describes the reaction of her patients to the oil rub which follows the bath as something approaching a "purr." The soothing oil used for this purpose contains the same original 16 minerals that were present in the cabinet fumes and leaves the body relaxed and refreshed, the skin as soft and smooth as velvet.

This treatment, of special value in cases of nervous exhaustion and natural fatigue caused by added hours of work this war time, is given in the quiet atmosphere of an immaculately clean bath salon where shaded light and hushed conversation create a perfect background for rejuvenation through complete composure and rest.

Sufferers from hay fever will be interested to know of the "Halafum" treatment which also uses the original 16 John F. Class minerals.

This inhaler is of particular benefit, too, in the alleviation of other respiratory disorders such as sinus, head colds and catarrh.

A nasal spray using the same properties is also available for the treatment of colds and sore throat.

Departments are maintained for both men and women at the Class Vapo Path Bath parlors on West Third street and treatments are given with or without appointment. Mrs. Davidson advises, however, that patients phone an approximate hour of arrival to avoid delay.

Office hours are from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, the evening hours being maintained for the convenience of war workers and business people who find it impossible to come during the day. Tuesday and Thursday the bath parlors are open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. and on Saturday from 9 a. m. to 12 noon.

OPS HAS BOOTH AT GARDEN SHOW TODAY, SUNDAY

Mrs. Oberlin to Demonstrate Food Processing by Dehydration.

The Ohio Public Service company will be represented in Richland county's first Victory Garden Show opening today at the Mansfield Armory, by Mrs. Irene Oberlin, home service director for the organization.

Mrs. Oberlin will show as many different products as possible in the process of dehydration, a method of food preservation rapidly gaining popularity with home makers this season when the supply of cans and pressure cookers is limited.

By this means, Mrs. Oberlin points out, Victory Gardens may be made to last longer, since important steps have been taken and improvements made in the processes of canning and dehydrating electrically so that vitamin content and much of the original flavor is retained.

On display at the Ohio Public Service booth will be several different types of dehydrators including an automatic commercial model thermostatically controlled. A few home-made models will be offered for sale.

Diagrams and instructions for making these simple dryers inexpensively at home will be available through the courtesy of the Ohio Public Service company.

Also available now, either in the showroom of the company or in their booth at the Garden show, are copies of a "Home Canning Guide" prepared by the Home Economics Institute of the Westinghouse Electric company.

This booklet contains complete instruction on food processing by means of quick freezing, dehydrating and brining as well as pointers on winter storage in cellars-pits and boxes, information which is of particular value to Victory garden harvesters at this time.

"Not many years ago," Mrs. Oberlin states, "putting up food at home was chiefly a matter of economy for most housewives who made a practice of canning and storing for winter use."

"Today," she goes on, "conservation and home food preservation by any one or more of the five methods discussed in the "Home Canning Guide" is the patriotic duty of every homemaker."

It is for this reason that the Ohio Public Service company is making available to the public the services of Mrs. Oberlin who will be stationed at the OPS booth during the Victory Garden show today until 10:30 p. m. and from 10 a. m to 10:30 p. m. tomorrow.

In this manner the organization is aiding in the promotion of a healthier and thus a more efficient home front.

CHAPTER XIX

The impact of Jake Hickory's avy boot against his ribs sent jolt of pain crashing through ob. A low moan pushed against s closed teeth. He heard Sugg's ld voice.

"Don't be a fool, Jake. Let this llow have a chance to talk. posse may be coming."

Lee was coming back to a world ill hazy and tip-tilted. Back of e pain and sickness in him was confused uncertainty. He knew was in the hands of his enees, but it was not quite clear him how this had come about. s head rolled over and lay still.

"He's gone again, you lunkad." Sugg's imperious voice me to Bob. "Get water. We've t to bring him to. When we I'll handle this."

Hickory's answering growl ight mean anything, but evintly he went for water for esently a bucketful descended the captive. Lee lay motionss, eyes shut. He felt Sugg's nd beneath his shirt, feeling for s heart.

"Beating strong," the promoter id. "He's coming around."

Jake swore. "Playin' possum. I yank off his boots and see w he likes branding."

"You'll keep out of this till I ve the word," Sugg ordered. He gave the cowboy a sharp ach in the flesh above the s close to the heart and noted e wince in Lee's face.

"You're not fooling us," he told b; "Take your choice. Talk me, or—"

Sugg waved a hand toward ckory. The alternative was ident.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

Class Bath Treatments Valuable In Soothing War Taut Nerves

J. F. Class Bath System Cites Success to 16 Minerals.

Making a valuable contribution to the war on "nerves" is the John F. Class Vapo Path Bath system whose health centers dot every section of America.

One of these is located in Mansfield at 144 West Third street. Managed for the past 16 years by F. D. Stotler, this local branch of the nationally known health chain is busy doing its patriotic part in relaxing the war taut nerves of civilians on the Richland county home front with its soothing mineral baths and quieting oil rubs.

Some 25 years ago, John F. Class, an invalid suffering from a so-called chronic ailment, began a series of scientific experiments with certain chemicals which are contained in the body and are therefore essential to its well being.

Combining these chemicals in secret proportion, Class hit upon the formula which not only effected his own recovery but which has been used with so much success on the thousands of devotees of the John F. Class Minerals baths from that day to this.

Mrs. Maude Davidson, for seven years an attendant in the women's department of the local bath parlors, is enthusiastic about the health promoting properties of this famous formula, perhaps because she has noted its effects upon hundreds of patients, from 18 months to 90 years, that have taken the baths under her surveillance.

These 16 minerals, she explains, are found in the vapor which envelops the body of the patient in the bath cabinets, permeating the pores, cleansing them of injurious waste and returning to the body in proper proportion the minerals it requires for functioning most efficiently.

Such a bath is pleasant and relaxing, but not in the least weakening, for the reason that the sterile cabinets are thermostatically controlled and always kept below body temperature.

Mrs. Davidson describes the reaction of her patients to the oil rub which follows the bath as something approaching a "purr." The soothing oil used for this purpose contains the same original 16 minerals that were present in the cabinet fumes and leaves the body relaxed and refreshed, the skin as soft and smooth as velvet.

This treatment, of special value in cases of nervous exhaustion and natural fatigue caused by added hours of work this war time, is given in the quiet atmosphere of an immaculately clean bath salon where shaded light and hushed conversation create a perfect background for rejuvenation through complete composure and rest.

Sufferers from hay fever will be interested to know of the "Halafum" treatment which also uses the original 16 John F. Class minerals.

This inhaler is of particular benefit, too, in the alleviation of other respiratory disorders such as sinus, head colds and catarrh.

A nasal spray using the same properties is also available for the treatment of colds and sore throat.

Departments are maintained for both men and women at the Class Vapo Path Bath parlors on West Third street and appointments are given with or without appointment. Mrs. Davidson advises, however, that patients phone an approximate hour of arrival to avoid delay.

Office hours are from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, the evening hours being maintained for the convenience of war workers and business people who find it impossible to come during the day. Tuesday and Thursday the bath parlors are open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. and on Saturday from 9 a. m. to 12 noon.

OPS HAS BOOTH AT GARDEN SHOW TODAY, SUNDAY

Mrs. Oberlin to Demonstrate Food Processing by Dehydration.

The Ohio Public Service company will be represented in Richland county's first Victory Garden Show opening today at the Mansfield Armory, by Mrs. Irene Oberlin, home service director for the organization.

Mrs. Oberlin will show as many different products as possible in the process of dehydration, a method of food preservation rapidly gaining popularity with home makers this season when the supply of cans and pressure cookers is limited.

By this means, Mrs. Oberlin points out, Victory Gardens may be made to last longer, since important steps have been taken and improvements made in the processes of canning and dehydrating electrically so that vitamin content and much of the original flavor is retained.

On display at the Ohio Public Service booth will be several different types of dehydrators including an automatic commercial model thermostatically controlled. A few home-made models will be offered for sale.

Diagrams and instructions for making these simple dryers inexpensively at home will be available through the courtesy of the Ohio Public Service company.

Also available now, either in the showroom of the company or in their booth at the Garden show, are copies of a "Home Canning Guide" prepared by the Home Economics Institute of the Westinghouse Electric company.

This booklet contains complete instruction on food processing by means of quick freezing, dehydrating and brining as well as pointers on winter storage in cellars-pits and boxes, information which is of particular value to Victory garden harvesters at this time.

"Not many years ago," Mrs. Oberlin states, "putting up food at home was chiefly a matter of economy for most housewives who made a practice of canning and storing for winter use."

"Today," she goes on, "conservation and home food preservation by any one or more of the five methods discussed in the "Home Canning Guide" is the patriotic duty of every homemaker."

It is for this reason that the Ohio Public Service company is making available to the public the services of Mrs. Oberlin who will be stationed at the OPS booth during the Victory Garden show today until 10:30 p. m. and from 10 a. m to 10:30 p. m. tomorrow.

In this manner the organization is aiding in the promotion of a healthier and thus a more efficient home front.

Fall and Winter Safety-First for Fruit Trees In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Released by Central Press Assn.)

Fruit trees in the Victory garden require watchful care even though they have not yet come into bearing. In fact, it is the care they receive as young trees that makes for bountiful crops in the years to come.

One winter task is the pruning of fruit trees, for pruning should be done when the trees are dormant. This means that fruit trees should be trimmed and shaped after their leaves have fallen and before new growth starts in the spring.

The shaping up of fruit trees while they are young is important. Fruit trees, for example, frequently develop V-crotch trunks. This should be remedied by pruning while the tree is young, otherwise, when the tree develops and becomes heavy with a full crop of fruit, the weaker of the trunks is apt to break off during a wind storm.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, one method of pruning to prevent V-crotch is to shorten one of the trunks, leaving it to form a branch while the other trunk continues to grow and in time becomes the main trunk. Another winter job is to spray for the control of leaf roller. As shown in the illustration, these insects winter over in the form of egg masses on the twigs, branches or trunks of a fruit tree. The egg masses are covered over with a smooth coating of dull brown or gray varnish-like substance which protects them not only from the weather but also from the gardener's view unless he or she is on the watch for them. The most effective control is a dormant oil spray applied before the spring growth starts.
